INTRODUCTION

These reports are intended for a general, nonspecialist audience. They run the gamut of the arts and sciences, historical and current events, and should provide the reader with useful introductions to given topics. May they encourage a few happy hours of suggestive thought!

THE CLASSICAL PHILOSOPHY OF COMMON SENSE

A mental disorder is a mental pattern which causes impairment in personal functioning. It causes a disturbance in an individual's cognition. A severe mental disorder is characterized by hallucinations, delusions and disorganized thinking, and its primary symptom is a rejection of the existence of physical objects. The antidote to the insanity, the psychosis and the schizophrenia of extreme mental disorder is the psychotherapy which activates the salutary light of common sense. On the mighty continent of Europe, in the North, there arose a culture premised on the psychosis of rejection of physical objects, while on the selfsame continent, in the South, there arose a culture premised on the antidote to this psychosis. In Northern Germanic Europe, one thousand years ago, there arose a culture whose symbol would be Faust, Doktor Johann Georg Faust, a German sorcerer of the fifteenth century, who made a pact with the Devil at a crossroads and exchanged his soul, his wisdom, reason, sanity and common sense, for unlimited will and power. In Southern Greco-Roman Europe, there arose a culture two thousand years ago premised on the opposite attitude to the later West, premised on the human sanity and the human flourishing which affirm the existence of a world outside of consciousness, and its shining symbol was Apollo, Greek god of the rational mind. Diametrically opposed to the midnight Western philosophy of Faust, to the philosophy born in the dark, deciduous forests of Northern Europe, is the noonday philosophy of Apollo, born on the light bathed islands and peninsulas of Greece, born on lands devoid of the deciduous forests which cover the sun all year round. The Greco-Roman philosophy of common sense, the philosophy of civilized people possessed of sound judgment, people able to perceive, understand and judge the world of physical objects, is a shining synonym for human sanity, for human health and well being, and is the only antidote to the sickness brought into the world by the fever of Western Faustian philosophy. Common sense: the belief that whatever exists does so, and has the properties it has, independently of consciousness. Common sense: the belief that perception is the perception of physical objects or it is the perception of nothing and does not exist. Common sense: the belief that man perceives what he perceives, he perceives a world of physical objects, or else man is blind because he has eyes and is blind because he sees. Common sense: the belief that physical existence exists or else nothing whatever exists. Common sense: the belief that to exist is to exist as something, to exist as this and not that, and that nothing can exist which is not the kind of thing it is, or which is both A and non A, or both a man and an ape, or both black all over and white all over, at one and the same time. Common sense: the belief that existence is characterized by essence, by being something, by noncontradiction, and that contradictions cannot exist. Common sense: the belief that nothing in nature can occur by chance because anything cannot become anything, or else things could become contradictions, and rain could produce fire, cats could give birth to dogs, there could be combinations called man-apes, and things could be both black all over and white all over at one and the same time. Common sense: the belief that any attempt to deny that reality is noncontradictory is self cancelling because the attempt would be both true and false, and would both exist and not exist, at one and the same time. Common sense: the belief that there exists no supernatural reality because such reality would be unperceivable and premised on the principle that man is blind because he has eyes and is blind because he sees; and such reality, because nonphysical, would be an infinite body and would be everything at one and the same time. Common sense: the belief that the universe is eternal and uncreated because no power could create existence out of nothingness or destroy it into nothingness; for there is no nothing, only something; and no power could create or destroy a natural fact, such as that one plus one equal two, a triangle has three sides or objects fall down and do not move up in a gravitational field. Common sense: the recognition that the doctrine of materialism, which states that matter is the sole reality in the universe and mind does not exist, is self cancelling and empirically false. It is self cancelling because the doctrine is itself a product of mental judgment and is expressed in human language and concepts. It is empirically false because when the mind thinks about a physical object, there are no registrations of light frequencies in the brain, as there are when the eyes perceive physical objects and light frequencies are registered on the retina. Common sense: the belief that knowledge of reality is gained by looking outward, gained by a process of induction, by a process in which laws are derived from observations, and is not gained by looking inward, by a process of mental inspection, or by the reception of revelations independently of experience. Common sense: the belief that any denial of the primacy of induction inevitably presupposes the primacy of induction, inasmuch as it utilizes the evidence of the senses, pointing out its alleged deficiencies, in its argument. Common sense: the belief that the laws of reality are derived from experience and that the laws of logic, the law that A is A, that a thing is as it is, cannot be known before it is in some way seen: seen in the objects in the world, such as tables and mountains, or seen in sentences such as a bachelor is an unmarried man or water is H2O, or seen at least as a numerical or alphabetic identity on a piece of paper, such as A is A or A=A or 1=1. Prior to being seen in some way, it is impossible that the law of identity can enter the mind. Common sense: the rejection of the famous analytic-synthetic dichotomy in Western philosophy. According to this dichotomy, true statements are divided into two camps: statements which are true solely by virtue of the meanings of terms, solely by virtue of an analysis of meanings, independently of all experience; and statements which are true by virtue of being derived from experience, true by virtue of the synthesis of an idea with an empirical fact. Statements which are true solely by virtue of the meanings of terms are held to be necessarily true, but such truths say nothing about reality, while statements which are true by virtue of being derived from experience are only contingently true and could have been otherwise and different. The statement A is A is held to be analytically true, or true solely by virtue of an analysis of the term A, but is held to say nothing about reality; while the statement water boils at one hundred degrees Celsius is held to be synthetically true, or held to true by virtue of the synthesis of the term water with the empirically determined boiling point. Common sense: the affirmation that no truths are analytic truths, because all meanings are derived from experience; all truths are synthetic truths; and all truths about nature are necessarily true, because an entity cannot act in contradiction to what it is, and water can never boil at zero degrees Celsius. Common sense: the affirmation that the meaning of a term and the reference of a term are one and the same thing, that a term means what it refers to, and refers to what it means. Common sense: the affirmation that names are arbitrary but not meanings or references. Common sense: the affirmation that the second planet from the Sun has three names but only one meaning or reference. Its three names are Venus, the Morning Star and the Evening Star, and these three names mean or refer to the same entity: the second planet from the Sun. Common sense: the affirmation that the doctrine that meanings or references are arbitrary because names are arbitrary is self cancelling, because the doctrine would itself be meaningless and refer to nothing. Common sense: the affirmation that the coherence theory of truth, according to which statements are true solely by virtue of their agreement with other statements within an internal system, is self cancelling, because the theory would itself be only internally true and not absolutely true. Common sense: the affirmation that the pragmatist theory of truth, according to which statements are true solely because they produce states of pleasure, satisfaction, utility or emotional well being, is self cancelling, because the theory would itself be only contingently true and not absolutely true. Common sense: the belief that at least one color in the world is real because an object which was extended but devoid of all color would be indistinguishable from its surrounding space. Common sense: the belief that all change presupposes the existence of something which changes, from something to something else, and change does not exist as a physical thing itself but only as a property of physical things. Common sense: the belief that the notion of relation presupposes the existence of things which are related and exist prior to and independently of their relations, and that there is no existence of relations as things themselves. Common sense: the belief that man's good is derived from man's nature as a rational animal, from the fact that man's basic means of survival is reason, and is thus universal and objective. Common sense: the belief that man's good is derived neither from commandments nor from intuitions nor from feelings nor from personal preferences, but is derived from induction, the induction that man is a rational animal, and is the life of rational flourishing and commitment to reason in both means and ends. Common sense: the belief that the moral commandment never to lie under any circumstances is without rational warrant, because to obey it could mean sending innocent people to their deaths. Common sense: the belief that the moral commandment never to break one's promises under any circumstances is without rational warrant, because to obey it could mean keeping a promise to be harmful or injurious to oneself or to others. Common sense: the belief that the moral commandment to always obey orders issued by one's superiors is without rational warrant, because to obey it could mean obeying orders which were evil, unjust or violated human rights. Common sense: the belief that one should always keep one's promises, one should never tell a lie and one should always obey orders issued by one's superiors, unless and until there is a rational warrant for doing the opposite of these. Common sense: the belief that because man is defined as a rational animal, individuals who do not obey this definition throughout the course of their lives, and do not lead a life of reason as regards both means and ends, are morally speaking no better than animals, and are not entitled to enjoy freedom. Common sense: the belief that individuals are entitled to possess life, liberty and property unless and until they do not rationally flourish and they begin to act like animals. Common sense: the belief that a liberal system, which guarantees as absolutes the rights to life, liberty and property, is without rational basis because it ignores the definition of man as a rational animal with one single, specific human end, the life of reason, and no other human ends. Common sense: the belief that a socialist system has no moral basis because it abolishes all human freedom before the decrees of a tribal juggernaut marked gender, race or class. Common sense: the belief that there is a difference between the market value of a commodity and its intrinsic value, between the price as determined by supply and demand and the price as determined by reference to the nature of the goods or services offered, between the price voted upon by consumers and the fair price of something. Common sense: the belief that individuals accused of crimes cannot be convicted on the basis of party testimony, because the parties involved have nothing to add by way of evidence beyond the allegations they have made or the stories they have put forward, or on the basis of circumstantial evidence, because such evidence cannot pinpoint perpetrators beyond a reasonable doubt, or on the basis of hearsay, because there is no in court examination of witnesses who have made the out of court statements. Common sense: the belief that the notion of intellectual property is a contradiction in terms, because if something cannot be seen, it exists only in the mind and cannot be possessed; and socalled intellectual property, encompassing patents, copyrights, trademarks and trade secrets, allows an unlimited number of people to possess it and replicate it without its being depleted, which is impossible. Common sense: the belief that art is the recreation of reality through the application of human creative skill and imagination; it is representation of the essence of objects in some physical medium, such as in clay or on a canvas or in musical notes or in a literary book; and is neither an uncritical, unselective journalistic recreation of reality nor a play of pure forms, such as lines, shapes, notes or words, unrelated to real objects. Common sense: the belief that painting is neither a photographic recreation of reality nor an exercise in pure formalism. Common sense: the belief that sculpture is the sculpture of real objects or it is the sculpture of nothing and does not exist. Common sense: the belief that music is not synonomous with random noise but is the art of arranging sounds to create an order called melody, a linear succession of tones perceived as a single, harmonious whole. Common sense: the belief that fiction literature is the art of storytelling which presents an interrelated sequence of events called a plot, or else, devoid of a plot, it is a story and an account of nothing, and is nonliterature. Common sense: the belief that architecture is an architecture of mass, the design and construction of buildings exemplifying the law of gravity, and not an architecture of space, which seeks to project a state of weightlessness in defiance of reality. Common sense: the belief that true buildings build, they separate themselves from the surrounding space, and do not merge with or collapse into their surroundings. The Bedlam Royal Hospital is a psychiatric hospital in London. Founded in the thirteenth century, it has a world famous history and has inspired horror books, films and television series, and its name has become a synonym for madness and confusion. William Gregory, the Lord Mayor London, describes the inhabitants of Bedlam: "A Church of Our Lady that is named Bedlam. And in that place be found many men that be fallen out of their minds. And honestly, they should be kept in that place until they are restored to their minds and health again. And some should abide there forever, for they are fallen so much out of themselves that they are incurable." Rejecting the philosophy of common sense and the primacy of physical objects, Western culture, since its inception, has projected reality as something nonphysical. Calling reality mind, ideas, impressions, sensations, forms of perception, categories of the understanding, unknowable things in themselves, the will to power, mental processes, abstract essences, words, propositions, forms of life and cultural posits, Western culture was born in the mad chambers of Faust, was born in a diseased state, and is incurable.

EUROPE: ONE CONTINENT, TWO CIVILIZATIONS

Cultures throughout the world have presented a threefold unity: they were founded by a single race, emerged from a single landscape, and exhibited a single pattern of thought. This unity has ruled man and society throughout the ages: one race, one landscape and one set of beliefs. Asia possesses three distinct landscapes from which there emerged three distinct cultures, Chinese, Indian and Russian, founded by three distinct races. In Central and South America, a single landscape produced a single culture, the Mayan culture, which was founded by a single race. Europe has been home to two distinct cultures, emerging from two distinct landscapes, and founded by two ethnic divisions of a single indigenous white race: by the Germanic whites who originated in the Scandinavian North, and by the Dorian whites who originated in Southeastern Greece, in Macedonia and Epirus. In Europe and in Europe alone, a single race founded two cultures, and two cultures which are as far removed from each other as day is removed from night. In Northern Europe, thousands of years ago, glaciers, ice sheets, deciduous forests, coniferous forests and clouded plains brought down a pall of unending cold, darkness, rain and thunder. In the South, sunlight and stillness bathed the land without surcease and cliffs, promontories, pines, cypresses and native Barbary macaques were immersed and stood silently in an eternal noonday. In Southern Europe, the light defined physical environment produced a culture around 1000 BC. In the North, the lightless physical environment produced a diametrically opposed culture around 1000 AD. In the South, the eternal noonday and its cosmos of unchanging static perfection plucked from the sky a god and made him master, voice and symbol of this world. This god was Apollo, Greek god of reason and light, and his world was Greco-Roman civilization. In the North, the black formlessness and tearing storms plucked from the underworld an avatar of Satan and made him master, voice and symbol of this world. This figure was Faust, German sorcerer and scholar of diabolism, and his world was Western civilization. The facts are as plain as daylight and as irrefutable as the axiom that A is A: the diametrical opposition between the culture of Apollo and the culture of Faust cuts through the traditional division of European history into ancient, medieval and modern, and reduces it to meaningless shreds. Look at the facts. On one continent, among one white race, two philosophers were active whose systems cannot be brought together under a single culture without doing violence to the term culture and rendering it a dead letter. A culture refers to the customs, arts, institutions and achievements of a nation, people or other group, and represents an indissoluble unity. A given culture presents a unity of thought, and in the absence of this unity, there is not a single culture

but a plurality of cultures. Look at the facts. An ancient Greek philosopher named Aristotle, active in the fourth century BC, devised a system based upon reason, common sense and ordinary experience, a system which defined human sanity and mental well being. A German philosopher named Immanuel Kant, active in the eighteenth century, devised a system based upon will, mysticism and mental inspection, a system which defined human psychosis and mental sickness and collapse. The attempt to bring these two philosophers together under a single umbrella culture is an attempt to falsify and obliterate what it means for something to be a part of a culture and is an attempt to accomplish the impossible. Aristotle. Look at the world of Aristotle and see a set of beliefs descend from the Olympian skies of Apollo. See the belief that whatever exists does so, and has the properties it has, independently of consciousness. See the belief that that perception is the perception of physical objects or it is the perception of nothing and does not exist. See the belief that man perceives what he perceives, he perceives a world of physical objects, or else man is blind because he has eyes and is blind because he sees. See the belief that any attempt to deny that reality is noncontradictory is self cancelling because the attempt would be both true and false, and would both exist and not exist, at one and the same time. See the belief that knowledge of reality is gained by looking outward, gained by a process of induction, by a process in which laws are derived from observations, and is not gained by looking inward, by a process of mental inspection, or by the reception of revelations independently of experience. See the belief that a socialist system has no moral basis because it abolishes all human freedom before the decrees of a tribal juggernaut marked gender, race or class. See the belief that fiction literature is the art of storytelling which presents an interrelated sequence of events called a plot, or else, devoid of a plot, it is a story and an account of nothing, and is nonliterature. Listen to Aristotle proclaim that perception is the perception of physical objects, and the notion that there can be such a thing as perception in the absence of physical objects, perception without an external cause, is a contradiction in terms. Such a notion entails perception which is the perception of nothing: "Sensation depends, as we have said, on a process of movement from without, for it is held to be some sort of change of quality. Why do we not perceive the senses themselves as well as the external objects of sense, or why without the stimulation of external objects do they not produce sensation, seeing that they contain in themselves fire, earth, and all the other elements, which are the objects of sense? It is clear that what senses exists only potentially, not actually. The power of sense is parallel to what is combustible, for that never ignites itself spontaneously, but requires an agent which has the power of starting ignition; otherwise it could have set itself on fire, and would not have needed actual fire to set it ablaze. What actual sensation apprehends is individuals, while what knowledge apprehends is universals, and these universals are in a sense within the soul. That is why a man can exercise his conceptual knowledge when he wishes, but his sensation, by contrast, does not depend upon himself: a sensible object must be there. A similar statement must be made about our knowledge of what is sensible: on the same ground, that the sensible objects are individual and external." (On The Soul by Aristotle, Book II, Part 5). Immanuel Kant. Look at the world of Immanuel Kant and see a set of beliefs ascend from the depths of hellfire. See these beliefs carried to Earth by Satan's emissary, Faust, and see them transcribed by Immanuel Kant, the preeminent philosophic voice of the Faustian West. At a crossroads, Doktor Johann Georg Faust made a pact with Satan, and exchanged his human soul, his sanity and sound judgment, for infinite will, experience and power. This protoganist of a classic

German legend, popularized by Christopher Marlowe and Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, this Faust, transmitted the words of Satan to Kant and this is what Kant recorded. Kant proclaims that all knowledge is acquired apriori, independently of experience, because the power of perception necessarily precedes all specific acts of perception, as potentiality necessarily precedes actuality: "Since, then, the receptivity of the subject, its capacity to be affected by objects, must necessarily precede all perceptions of these objects, it can readily be understood how the form of all perceptions can be given prior to all actual perceptions, and so exist in the mind apriori." (Critique Of Pure Reason by Immanuel Kant). Kant proclaims that these apriori forms, because they are fixed and innate, serve as filters and screens which forever prevent man from perceiving reality. While common sense affirms that an individual is blind when his eyes do not function and when he cannot see, Kant proclaims that an individual is blind precisely because he has eyes which function and precisely because he can see. Kant proclaims that when an individual perceives physical objects, he perceives nothing real. Kant proclaims that the system of common sense realism must be replaced by a system of "transcendental idealism" or apriori subjectivism, according to which physical objects are "mere representations and not things in themselves", and man's perceptions are "only subjective forms of our perception, not determinations given for themselves or conditions of objects as things in themselves". (Critique Of Pure Reason by Immanuel Kant). Since all perception is subjective, all science is subjective, all true morality is subjective and founded upon internal, categorical feelings and intuitions which must be obeyed without regard to consequences, all politics must be liberal politics, since there exists no objective truth or goodness which can be enforced, and all true art is subjective and consists in nothing more than a free play of pure forms, pure lines, shapes, colors, words and sounds, without meaning, reference or content of any kind. One thousand years ago, a mighty river roared out from the plains and forests of Northern Europe. It was a Faustian river of will, romanticism, expressionism and subjective existence. It reached a crescendo in the Kantian projection of a transcendental, apriori, subjective, sealed off, self enclosed, self perceiving ego. In the centuries after Kant, it ran thinner and thinner and formed neoKantian swamplands of linguistic analysis, the existentialist "being there" which is nowhere, and gender, race and class politics. In the twenty first century, a thousand years after it began its fearsome onrush, it has vanished into brooks and streams of pure psychosis.

DIVERSITY, EQUITY AND INCLUSION: SPELLED NSDAP

Nuremberg, Germany. September 10–16, 1935. The Seventh National Socialist Party Congress. Amidst massed crowds and spectators screaming and seig heiling to the fuhrer on the stands of the Zeppelinfeld, laws are announced which made Germany an officially racist state. These laws proclaimed that only racially pure Germans would be allowed to be citizens. They banned "race mixing" and "race defilement" defined as intermarriages and sexual relations between Jews and Germans. They required people to prove their grandparents' racial identities. Almost a century after the enactment of the Nuremberg race laws, the ghosts of the past returned to stalk the world's arsenal of freedom and transformed it into a latter day, national socialist state. Proclaiming that race is the essence of man and society and affirming the primacy of the Aryan race over all other races, the Third Reich launched a program of discrimination, persecution and extermination beneath the shadow of its master. Its master was Karl Marx and the German swastika bearers substituted race for class and implemented a regime of race Marxism which reduced Germany to a racist charnel house, in the manner that classic Marxism, the original version, had reduced Russia to a classist charnel house. In Adolf Hitler's Germany, the names, dates and characters on the Russian stage changed but the form and essence of the tragedy remained the same: the triumph of tribalism over liberal order and the abolition of the rights of man. In the twenty first century, a triple headed Gorgon, the latest monstrosity to leap out of the reading rooms of Marxism, has appeared in a land once dedicated to protecting the cause of freedom throughout the world, and enacted a tragedy of epic, world historical proportions. In the United States of America, a nightmare known as gender, race and class politics has reared its head, and to massed crowds and spectators screaming and seig heiling to their new fuhrer social justice, reduced constitutional government to a dead letter and banished liberal ideals from the precincts of the nation. In the twenty first century, in Joe Biden's America, the neoMarxist monster of gender, race and class has spread into every level of society and made America, once the land of the free and home of the brave, an officially antiliberal state. This creature, large, ugly and frightening, breathes the fires of tribalism under the latest slogan of diversity, equity and inclusion. The names, dates and characters on the German stage have changed but the form and essence of the tragedy have remained the same: once again, the triumph of tribalism over liberal order and the abolition of the rights of man. Look at Joe Biden's America and see human reversion and regression elevated to the supreme laws of the land. Civilized people understand that diversity, because opposed to meritocracy, is a racist and sexist goal, that inclusion, because opposed to meritocracy, is a racist and sexist goal, and that diversity and inclusion are at the farthest remove from equity and are the definitions of inequity and unfairness. Look at Joe Biden's America and see the implementation of an agenda of race and gender discrimination and the embedding of this latest iteration of Marxism into the fabric of everyday life, and see its items appear as symptoms of a cancer which has made America unrecognizable. Item. Listen to Gina Abercrombie-Winstanley, Chief Diversity and Inclusion Officer in Joe Biden's State Department, proclaim that a progressive society distributes ranks and grades on the basis of race, ethnicity and gender. Listen to her proclaim that a progressive society ignores the best and brightest candidates for jobs in favor of candidates who check the appropriate boxes marked race and gender. Listen to her proclaim that a progressive society removes all barriers to jobs for unqualified blacks and women, and ensures that talent and ability have nothing whatever to do with attracting, hiring, promoting and retaining workers, and that only blacks and women are chosen for work. Listen to her proclaim that a progressive society is proud to tell the world what it is: a racist and sexist society which allows blacks and women to rise to the highest levels of power and success by virtue of the fact that they are blacks and women: "My office has now published a demographic baseline report that provides an unprecedented look at our bureaus, broken down by race, ethnicity, gender, status of disability, grade, rank and job series skill codes. We plan to release an updated report annually to begin to show trend lines. Now that we have a better sense of who we are, we can better ensure we tap the best and brightest among all Americans to represent this great nation. We intend to attract, hire, promote, and retain talent, and remove barriers that might keep some from rising as far as their talents can take them. This goal is widely shared by our workforce and Congress. I thank you for your leadership and support for improving DEIA and note our goal is to fully implement Congressional intent." (Diversity, Equity, Inclusion And Accessibility In The Department Of State, written testimony by Gina Abercrombie-Winstanley, United States House Foreign Affairs Committee, Tuesday, June 13, 2023). Item. Listen to Joe Biden proclaim that a progressive society justifies racism and sexism in the name of equity. Listen to him proclaim that a progressive society rejects meritocracy and justifies the selection of blacks, women, gays, lesbians and people who say they are members of the opposite sex, because they are blacks, women, gays, lesbians and say they are members of the opposite sex, in the name of equality, nondiscrimination and achieving equitable outcomes: "My Administration has embedded a focus on equity into the fabric of Federal policymaking and service delivery. Our work to transform the way the Federal Government serves the American people has been complemented by Executive Order 14035 of June 25, 2021 (Diversity, Equity, Inclusion And Accessibility In The Federal Workforce), which continues to help ensure that my Administration—the most diverse in our Nation’s history—reflects the growing diversity of the communities we serve. My Administration's commitment to equity has produced better decision making and more equitable outcomes. We have taken historic steps to advance full equality for lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer, and intersex (LGBTQI+) Americans, including by ending the ban on transgender service members in our military; prohibiting discrimination based on sexual orientation, gender identity, and sex characteristics across Federal programs." (Executive Order On Further Advancing Racial Equity And Support For Underserved Communities Through The Federal Government, President Joe Biden, February 16, 2023). Item. Look at the West today and see race and gender worshiped as the holy dogmas of the age. See racism and sexism rebranded as fairness and equity. See racism and sexism peddled as equality and antidiscrimimation. See an antimodern assassination of meritocracy perpetrated from snipers' nests marked gender, race and class. See the placing of employment, university admissions, and access to government benefits and services under the control of commissars whose assignment is to shut out successful, white males. See Joseph Stalin's antikulak death squads reload their rifles and fire at white males. See Adolf Hitler's Kristallnacht cultural revolution take up new cudgels and smash the offices of white males. See Mao Zedong's proletarian Cultural Revolution reoriented to place white males within the crosshairs of its Red Guards. See classic Marxist class hatred evolve into race hatred, gender hatred and a neoStalinist, neoHitlerite and neoMaoist revolution to overthrow liberal democracy: "Yesterday, President Biden issued an Executive Order titled Further Advancing Racial Equity and Support for Underserved Communities Through The Federal Government. Without any Congressional authorization, Biden has ordered a radical, racist, and fundamentally antiAmerican overhaul of every federal function under the guise of equity. Equity is a euphemism for discrimination based on race, national origin, sex, or economic class with respect to employment, university admissions, and access to government benefits, programs, or services. As applied, equity is nothing more or less than a rebranding and reorientation of the racism in the Jim Crow era, the class hatred in Stalin's antikulak policies, and the dogmatism of Mao's Cultural Revolution. The Biden Administration is no stranger to illegal programs to advance 'equity.' For example, President Biden and his congressional allies rendered certain farmers completely ineligible for COVID-19 related farm aid, based solely on the fact that they were white. America First Legal sued and stopped the program, which was subsequently rescinded by Congress. President Biden and his congressional allies also put certain American restaurant owners at the back of the line for COVID-19 related benefits–again, because they were white. AFL sued and stopped this. To be clear, the pursuit of 'equity' is not just a federal phenomenon. AFL currently has multiple class action lawsuits against private and public entities like Amazon, Texas A & M University and six Texas medical schools for racially discriminatory hiring and admissions practices–all of which are premised on 'equity.' " (New Racist Biden EO Installs Equity Czars In Every Federal Agency And Converts Entire Exec Branch Into Woke DEI Cult: AFL Vows Relentless Opposition, America First Legal, website). One hundred years after the Bolshevik revolution in Russia and fifty years after the fall of the Third Reich, an airplane marked gender, race and class took off from Marx's and Hitler's airfields. To the thunderous applause and cheers of the mob, it landed in the twenty first century. Its landing was accompaned by a new Horst Wessel Lied blasting out the gospels of black power, feminist power, transgender power, gay and lesbian power and the destruction of the West.

A FLOWER BLOOMS IN AN ANCIENT DESERT

The Valley of the Moon is the driest place on Earth. Located in northern Chile eight kilometers west of the town of San Pedro de Atacama, this forbidding lunar like terrain has not received a drop of rain in centuries, and prototypes for Mars rovers are tested there. The ancient world, excluding Classical Greco-Roman civilization, presented a spiritual picture of the engulfing heat and dessication which oppress the Valley of the Moon and render it hostile to all forms of life. The desert of the nonClassical ancient world saw saline outcrops in the form of moral systems which declared war on the life of man and prevented the development of proper human flourishing. It presented a landscape of inhumanity across which the hot, dry winds of fear and superstition blew and suffocated civilized aspirations. The saline sculptures of the nonClassical world defined mankind at its moral and spiritual worst and showed in clear and unequivocal starkness what happens in societies and cultures when the rule of reason is absent. Look at this barren world without rain, without life, denuded into the fiery depths of hell, and see an anticosmos without the law and order which differentiates man from the animals. Rejecting the peace, balance, moderation and equilibrium grounded in reason which marked the morality of Classical culture, the moralities of the nonClassical world presented a scene of infernal fanaticism which disintegrated, weathered, eroded and shattered everything civilized in its sight and reduced human progress to sand dunes of sterility and stagnation. Listen to the high priests of Confucianism proclaim that morality consists in following the path of duty come what may, accepting one's position in society, and blindly obeying the commands of one's family and one's state: "In late traditional China, emperors sought to establish village lectures on Confucian moral precepts and to give civic awards to filial sons and obedient wives. The imperial family and other notables sponsored the publication of morality books that encouraged the practice of Confucian values: respect for parents, loyalty to government, and keeping to one's place in society—farmers should remain farmers and practice the ethics of farming." (Confucianism by the Asia Society). Listen to the high priests of Buddhism proclaim that reality is nothingness and morality consists in self abnegation, self abasement and the rejection of all forms of existence: "According to this simple teaching all forms of craving must be extinguished to make life serene. The very idea of Nirvana is the state of mind coextensive with this serenity. The craving for individuality is the cause of all turmoil and greed. There can be no happiness, no righteousness, nor social order, if man is not free from selfish desire and egoism. It is the way out of this craving and the attainment of eternal peace that is taught by the Buddhist doctrine of Nirvana as the Supreme God of all humanity." (The Buddhist Doctrine of Nirvana by Parawahera Thera). Listen to the high priests of Judaism proclaim the primacy of the word of God and a life of service and sacrifice in the name of God: "The world rests upon three things: Torah, service to God and service to others." (Simon the Just, in Chapters Of The Fathers). Listen to the high priests of Christianity proclaim that the meaning of life resides in the rejection of this world and preparation for life in the world to come: "The meaning of this life is to be prepared for our homeland, for heaven, for Paradise. The most important thing is for man to grasp this most profound meaning of life, which is the salvation of the soul. When man believes in God and in the future life, then he understands the vanity of this present life and prepares his passing to the next." (Spiritual Awakening by Elder Paisios). Listen to the high priests of Islam proclaim that morality consists in the rejection of reason in favor of faith and abject submission to God, to the angels, to the books, to the prophets, to one's family, to the poor, to the beggars and to the criminals: "Righteousness is not in turning your faces towards the east or the west. Rather, the righteous are those who believe in Allah, the Last Day, the angels, the books, and the prophets; who give charity out of their cherished wealth to relatives, orphans, the poor, needy travellers, beggars, and for freeing captives; who establish prayer, pay alms tax, and keep the pledges they make; and who are patient in times of suffering, adversity, and in the heat of battle. It is they who are true in faith, and it is they who are mindful of Allah." (Quran, 2:177). Listen to the high priests of Islam proclaim that morality consists in submission to Allah, Mohammed and the judgments pronounced on the Last Day when the world will come to an end: "Oh you who believe! Obey God and obey the Messenger and those in authority among you. And if you differ among yourselves concerning any matter, refer it to God and the Messenger, if you believe in God and the Last Day. That is better, and fairer in outcome." (Quran, 4:59). Listen to the high priests of Islam proclaim that morality consists in obeying the words of Allah, the omnipotent creator of existence out of nothingness and the creater of all manner of contradictions, and obeying the words of his prophet: "Allah Almighty is our Lord and the Creator of the entire universe. He created everything in it through His might. Having the ability to perform good deeds and refrain from sins is granted by Him. Giving the command to carry out an action or to prohibit one from doing something is at His discretion. It is Allah Almighty Who ordered His people to obey Him and His beloved Prophet." (An Islamic Perspective On Obedience by Maulana Sayyid Numaan Attari Madani). Amidst this ancient wasteland of mental abdication, there arose a seed bearer whose brightly colored petals would dazzle people throughout the world and throughout the ages, and plant in their souls the inspiration to travel down the shining path of true human flourishing. This outcrop of life was the only culture mankind has known devoted to the rule of reason. Its symbol was Apollo, the Greek god of reason whose dark counterpart in the West would be Faust, the idol of the will, and its preeminent voice was Aristotle. Listen to Aristotle proclaim that all things possess a function because all things possess an essence or a definition, and the good of anything resides in the performance of its function. Listen to Aristotle proclaim that the essence of man is not mere life, and is not mere perception, which is shared by the animals. It is not a vegetable existence and it is not a bestial existence. It is not a life governed by feelings, reactions, instincts, impulses or fixed patterns of behavior. The definition of man is a rational animal. The special function of man is the performance of reason. This is the faculty of man which thinks, understands and makes judgments by a process of logic. The good life of man is a life governed by this faculty. The good life of man is a life which in its ends and in its means is sanctioned by reason. The good life of man is a life of rational activity, virtue, power, nobility and excellence: "Presumably, however, to say that well doing is the chief good seems a platitude, and a clearer account of what it is is still desired. This might perhaps be given, if we could first ascertain the function of man. For just as for a flute player, a sculptor, or an artist, and, in general, for all things that have a function or activity, the good and the well is thought to reside in the function, so would it seem to be for man, if he has a function. Have the carpenter, then, and the tanner certain functions or activities, and has man none? Is he born without a function? Or as eye, hand, foot, and in general each of the parts evidently has a function, may one lay it down that man similarly has a function apart from all these? What then can this be? Life seems to be common even to plants, but we are seeking what is peculiar to man. Let us exclude, therefore, the life of nutrition and growth. Next there would be a life of perception, but it also seems to be common even to the horse, the ox and every animal. There remains, then, an active life of the element that has a rational principle; of this, one part has such a principle in the sense of being obedient to one, the other in the sense of possessing one and exercising thought. And, as the life of the rational element also has two meanings, we must state that life in the sense of activity is what we mean; for this seems to be the more proper sense of the term. Now if the function of man is an activity of soul which follows or implies a rational principle, and if we say so and so and a good so and so have a function which is the same in kind, for example, a lyre, and a good lyre player, and so without qualification in all cases, eminence in respect of goodness being added to the name of the function (for the function of a lyre player is to play the lyre, and that of a good lyre player is to do so well): if this is the case, then we state the function of man is to be a certain kind of life, and this to be an activity or actions of the soul implying a rational principle, and the function of a good man to be the good and noble performance of these. And if any action is well performed when it is performed in accordance with the appropriate excellence, if this is the case, then human good turns out to be activity of soul in accordance with rational virtue." (Nicomachean Ethics by Aristotle, Book I, Chapter 7). The collapse of Rome before a rising tide of Christians, Germans, government overreach and welfare statism, welcomed with open arms by the new mobs in charge, resulted in the disappearance of an Apollonian oasis amidst the moral deserts of the ancient world. The establishment of the Faustian West sealed the fate of reason and ensured that it would never rise again.

KANTIAN HERMENEUTICS SHUTS OUT REALITY

A vacuum chamber is an enclosure from which all air has been removed. It allows scientists to conduct special experiments and test devices which must operate in outer space. The largest vacuum chamber in the world is NASA's Space Power Facility. Standing thirty seven meters high and thirty meters in diameter, it tests space propulsion systems and airbag landing for the Mars Pathfinder and Mars Exploration Rovers. In the eighteenth century, a German philosopher, born on Konigsberg and the preeminent son of the Kingdom of Prussia, created a mental pump which sought to remove reality from philosophy and seal the inhabitants inside. He lived during the Age of Enlightenment but declared war on its ideals and planted the seeds of its destruction. He created the largest mental vacuum in the history of mankind and his rejection of reality made him the most influential figure in the most perverse school of philosophy in the history of mankind: the school of Western, Faustian, nonClassical, romanticist philosophy. Look at what this central antiEnlightenment thinker who lived during the Enlightenment proclaimed, and then look at a tragic casualty of his assault on reality. Look at the philosophy of Immanuel Kant, and then look at what his followers did to the science of hermeneutics. Look at the words of the master, and then look at the consequences: the remnants of a once venerated science, mangled and savaged beyond recognition in a violent vacuum and vortex called transcendental idealism. The Philosophic Suction. According to Kant, space and time have no existence outside of us; they are mere subjective "forms of intuition"; and they create the universal illusion of physical objects. The physical objects we perceive are mere appearances, while the existence of things in themselves is unperceivable. All acts of perception are "transcendental" or apriori or independent of experience, because potentiality necessarily exists before actuality, and the capacity to perceive necessarily exists before the actual perceiving of something. This apriori capacity creates a fixed, internal screen which stands between the perceiver and reality and forever prevents him from perceiving reality. Thus man is blind, not because he cannot see, but precisely because he has functioning eyes. Whenever man sees, whenever his eyes function, the inbuilt, apriori capacity means that he sees nothing and projects a veil of illusion. Whenever man's eyes function, they must be disregarded, and reality can only be revealed to man by means of mystical, nonvisual feeling, and this reality is supernatural, nonphysical, and "noumenal" or unperceivable in character. Listen to Kant produce a nonsequitur and proclaim that because potentiality necessarily precedes actuality, and the power to perceive necessarily precedes an actual perception, therefore all knowledge is acquired apriori: "Since, then, the receptivity of the subject, its capacity to be affected by objects, must necessarily precede all perceptions of these objects, it can readily be understood how the form of all appearances can be given prior to all actual perceptions, and so exist in the mind apriori." (Critique Of Pure Reason by Immanuel Kant). Listen to Kant proclaim that all knowledge is acquired apriori, and is on that account purely subjective and is knowledge of nothing whatever: "Hitherto it has been assumed that all our knowledge must conform to objects. But all attempts to extend our knowledge of objects by establishing something in regard to them apriori, by means of concepts, have, on this assumption, ended in failure. We must therefore make trial whether we may not have more success in the tasks of metaphysics, if we suppose that objects must conform to our knowledge." (Critique Of Pure Reason by Immanuel Kant). Listen to Kant proclaim that what the ignorant, the untutored and the naive believe is real, the world of physical objects, is in fact nothing more than a subjective form, condition and representation: "I understand by the transcendental idealism of all appearances the doctrine that they are all together to be regarded as mere representations and not things in themselves, and accordingly that time and space are only sensible forms of our intuition, but not determinations given for themselves or conditions of objects as things in themselves. To this idealism is opposed realism, which regards space and time as something given in themselves (independent of our sensibility). (Critique Of Pure Reason by Immanuel Kant).

Hermeneutics In The Wake Of Kant. The study of textual interpretation known as hermeneutics has an ancient and noble lineage. It made its appearance in a culture as different from the West as noonday is opposed to midnight. It made its appearance in Classical, Apollonian, nonromanticist, nonFaustian culture; the term hermeneutics is derived from the Greek god Hermes, the god of language and speech; and it was first described in the works of the preeminent philosopher of this culture. Look at Aristotle's description of hermeneutics and see the condemnation of subjectivism as a symptom of irrationalism and insanity: "The early usage of hermeneutics places it within the boundaries of the sacred. A divine message must be received with implicit uncertainty regarding its truth. This ambiguity is an irrationality; it is a sort of madness that is inflicted upon the receiver of the message. Only one who possesses a rational method of interpretation (a hermeneutic) could determine the truth or falsity of the message." (Introduction To Philosophical Hermeneutics by Jean Grondin). Rejecting in true Western style Aristotle's Classical philosophy of realism and common sense, Kant detonated a bomb whose fall out rained down poison on the pages of hermeneutics and made them dangerous and impossible to handle by sane, civilized people. Look at the thought of three neoKantian philosophers and see the development of a new Western hermeneutics, which is as different from the Classical original as a sickness of the soul is opposed to mental health and well being. Look at Friedrich Schleiermacher and see the proclamation that words refer to nothing in reality and meaning is manufactured by language, text, use, context and consciousness: "Ideal interpretation is of its nature a holistic activity. In particular, any given piece of text needs to be interpreted in light of the whole text to which it belongs, and both need to be interpreted in light of the broader language in which they are written, their larger historical context, a broader preexisting genre, the author’s whole corpus, and the author’s overall psychology. Such holism introduces a pervasive circularity into interpretation, for, ultimately, interpreting these broader items in its turn depends on interpreting such pieces of text." (Friedrich Daniel Ernst Schleiermacher by Michael Forster, Stanford Encyclopedia Of Philosophy). Look at Wilhelm Dilthey and see the proclamation that the meaning of a text is not any physical reality but is social, temporal and historical in character, and is made by the "forces of life" and the "existence of consciousness". See the proclamation that meaning and interpretation are functions of place and time and not fact or reality: "Dilthey seeks to understand the meaning of things in terms of their own inherent context. Hermeneutical understanding provides a kind of situated understanding that receives its bearings from the reflexive awareness of lived or prescientific experience." (Wilhelm Dilthey, encyclopedia.com). Look at Hans-Georg Gadamer and see the proclamation that the meaning of a text is made by the interpreter and not by the facts of reality. See the proclamation that the meaning of a text is a product of the interpreter's perceptions, experiences, opinions, limits, conversations and standpoints. See the proclamation that reality is a product of language and interpretation and does not exist outside of consciousness: "Hence the meaning of a text is not to be compared with an immovably and obstinately fixed point of view that suggests only one question to the person trying to understand it, namely how the other person could have arrived at such an opinion. In this sense understanding is certainly not concerned with 'understanding historically', that is, reconstructing the way the text came into being. Rather, one intends to understand the text itself. But this means that the interpreter's own thoughts too have gone into reawakening the text's meaning. In this the interpreter's own horizon is decisive, yet not as a personal standpoint that he maintains or enforces, but more as an opinion and a possibility that one brings into play and puts at risk, and that helps one truly to make one's own what the text says. I have described this above as a 'fusion of horizons.' We can now see that this is what takes place in conversation, in which something is expressed that is not only mine or my author's, but common. All understanding is interpretation, and all interpretation takes place in the medium of a language that allows the object to come into words and yet is at the same time the interpreter's own language." (Truth And Method by Hans-Georg Gadamer, Part Three). In the sunlit Classical world of reason and sanity, hermeneutics was conceived as a straight, undeviating line extending from word to object and from text to the reality it represents. In the midnight Western world of subjectivism, hermeneutics has been recast, reimagined and obliterated. Beneath the shadow of Kant, hermeneutics has been conceived as an exercise in self interpretation, as the interpretation of nothing, as a closed circle and a prisonhouse of the mind.

TARGET: TRUMP

A sight is a device used to a create an alignment between a weapon and a target. There are metal sights, optical sights and digital sights, and without such devices, there is no precise aiming point for a weapon and a low likelihood of destroying the target. The iconic picture of an iron sight atop a Heckler and Koch MP5 automatic weapon illustrates the terrifying necessity of a military sight. Since the dawn of the twentieth century, when the dark rays of communism first struck America and under the guise of progressivism proceeded to transform the nation, the voices of the opposition have been placed within the establishment's sights and have been mercilessly targeted for destruction. The targeting of the mavericks Joe McCarthy and Barry Goldwater by the establishment were mere overtures to an extended, roaring, thundering symphony of destruction which has reached its climax in the present day. A century and a half after its premiere at the Bayreuth Festival Theater on August 17, 1876, Gotterdammerung has returned and brought forth the greatest targeting of an antiestablishmentarian in the history of America. It has targeted the forty fifth president of the United States and in the process has incinerated the liberal traditions and institutions of the nation, after which, in a departure from the original Norse myth, there will be no rebirth and no renewal. America is in flames and this conflagration was decreed by the Norns, whose Rope of Destiny has caught hold of Donald Trump, the greatest antiestablishmentarian in the history of the nation, and set him on fire in an American Valhalla, which unlike the original, is without majesty and without a god of wisdom like Odin, and is presided over by a devil called communist mob rule. This devil, surrounded by black fire, has reduced constitutional government to smoke and ashes and returned the nation to the primordial landscape.
Backstory of noncrimes and double standards. Three people served at the highest levels of the United States government and all three committed the same acts and only one was prosecuted. Three people, Hillary Clinton, Joe Biden and Donald Trump, and only one, Donald Trump, was placed within the crosshairs of the establishment. Trump was indicted on thirty seven charges related to files found at his home in Florida. Marked Secret and Top Secret, 325 files were discovered in an FBI raid of Mar a Lago conducted in 2022. Lawyers for Joe Biden discovered classified documents at an office he used in Washington and at his home in Delaware. The documents were marked sensitive compartmented information, and contained details about Ukraine, Iran and Britain, and intelligence gathering methods and sources. Joe Biden was not prosecuted. Hillary Clinton, while serving as secretary of state from 2009-2013 under President Barack Obama, illegally shared government information on her unsecured home server. She deleted over 30,000 emails which were wanted by Congress and determined by the FBI to be classified. She deleted them to cover up her illegal raising of funds for the Clinton Foundation. Hillary Clinton was not prosecuted. FBI Director James Comey stated that although she had been "extremely careless" in using her private server, she had not been grossly negligent, as the law requires for prosecution, and that her carelessness was not intentional and thus did not rise to the level of a crime. Reality saw the Clinton affair differently. Reality saw that the phrase extremely careless is a synonym of grossly negligent, and that the law does not require the proving of intent but simply the proving of gross negligence. The National Archives asked Trump for classified documents from his presidential term. He refused to hand over all the documents requested and an FBI raid found the remainder. The documents include details of American nuclear weapons programs, American military vulnerabilities, and American plans for retaliatory military attacks. Trump was charged with thirty one counts of "willful retention of national defense information". Prosecutors proclaimed that Trump knew his retention of the documents was unlawful and that he showed the documents to people without security clearances. He was charged with obstruction of justice in knowingly evading official requests for the documents and telling his lawyers to lie and not to cooperate with the authorities. Reality saw the Trump affair differently. Reality saw that the president of the United States, under Article Two of the Constitution, possesses the following powers: he possesses "executive power" and is "commander in chief" of the nation's armed forces. If these words mean anything, they mean that the president is the owner of all documents in the executive branch of government. They mean that all requests for the documents are requests for private property and must be made on clear and compelling grounds which allege the commission of an external crime, a crime not connected with the mere possession of the documents themselves, but with the commission of other acts. These words mean that the president has a right to handle, mishandle, classify, declassify, share, transmit, conceal, cover up and lie about these documents at his discretion. If a person purchases a book and takes the book to his home, he has a right to handle, mishandle, classify, declassify, share, transmit, conceal, cover up and lie about the book at his discretion. These words mean that subpoenas for the mere possession of these documents are unconstitutional, that charges such as obstruction of justice and willful retention in relation to mere possession are unconstitutional, and that statutes such as the Espionage Act and the Presidential Records Act, which either assume that executive documents are not the private property of the president, or else purport to officially change their ownership from private to public, are unconstitutional. Both Hillary Clinton and Joe Biden proclaimed, and the establishment proclaimed, that their actions were not crimes because they fully cooperated with the authorities. Reality saw the Biden and Clinton affairs differently. Reality saw that the act of cooperation serves to highlight the guilt of the parties and is a confession of law breaking. A person who robs a bank and then, after being caught, cooperates with the authorities and returns all the money he stole is not less guilty of bank robbery and his cooperation does not serve to erase but rather to emphasize the crime. Look at the establishment's targeting of Donald Trump and see the fabrication of a crime, the crime of mishandling classified documents, a fabrication because the president, as the holder of executive power and the commander in chief of the armed forces, has the right under the Constitution to own, dispose of, handle and mishandle classified documents. See the nation's premier antiestablishmentarian condemned for crimes he never committed and pilloried on the basis of false allegations. See the operation of a double standard as brazen and breathtaking as it is the mark of Cain on a nation which assassinated the rule of law: Hillary Clinton was interviewed without compulsion at the FBI, while Trump was not; she was allowed to have counsel present during the interview, while Trump was not; her lawyers were granted immunity from prosecution before they were allowed to sit with her during the interview, while Trump's lawyers were not; her server was never seized or examined; Trump's lawyers were brought before a grand jury and ordered to testify and violate attorney-client privilege; Trump's private home was raided by the FBI, while Clinton's home was not; and Trump was subjected to a special counsel investigation, while Clinton was not. See the personification of justice, blindfolded and balancing scales, dating back thousands of years to the Egyptians and the Romans, sullied and disgraced by the communist establishment in control of America which has targeted Donald Trump for destruction: "Former federal prosecutor Francey Hakes told Newsmax on Monday that she believes former President Donald Trump and former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton have been treated 'so differently' when it comes to allegedly mishandling classified documents. 'While it sounds damning, it looks damning for the president, so did the FISA warrant against Carter Page when I read it, and so did all the allegations that Adam Schiff laid against President Trump when the Russia allegations came forward,' Hakes said during an appearance on Newsmax's The Record With Greta Van Sustern. 'It all sounded very damning, but the proof didn't end up being there. I don't know whether the proof is going to end up being there or not, but it does seem to me that President Trump is being treated differently than the Hillary Clinton case. She was treated so differently. She was brought in to interview at the FBI. She was allowed to have her lawyers with her. Her lawyers were given immunity before they were allowed to sit with her. Nobody ever seized her server to look at it, to do any kind of forensic review of it, and you have here President Trump's lawyers actually brought into the grand jury and ordered by a judge to testify as to things that would ordinarily be considered privilege. There was a raid on Mar a Lago and then there was a grand jury investigation and then there was a special counsel. Trump and Clinton were definitely treated differently, so it's hard for me to see Lady Justice with her blindfold on at this moment.' " (Hakes To Newsmax: Trump, Hillary Clinton 'Treated So Differently' by Nicole Wells, Newsmax, June 12, 2023). Prophesied in Norse mythology and prophesied by students of history, civilization is burning and the flames have engulfed America. Look at the flames as they rise in sheets to the heavens and crackle along the ground. See Donald Trump treated like a common criminal over documents which, under the Constitution, he had ownership of as president. See Joe Biden, who took classified documents to his home and office, which, as vice president, he had no ownership of, not prosecuted. See the Department of Justice refuse to prosecute Hillary Clinton for mishandling classified information in 2016. See the Department of Justice launch an investigation into Trump in 2016 based on political motives and disinformation provided by Hillary Clinton. In contrast to the Old Norse Ragnarok, there will be no immersion of water of this conflagration and no renewal of the world. The flames have incinerated America as a constitutional republic and brought forth its collapse into a banana republic without hope for the future.

BLACK POWER INVASION USA

A beachhead is a temporary line created when invading troops reach a landing beach and commence an attack on a nation. When more troops arrive, the entire invading force advances inland and seeks to complete the attack. On June 6, 1944, the most famous beachhead in history was established in Normandy, France. Code named Operation Overlord, the Battle for Normandy commenced with an amphibious landing on Omaha Beach. The largest seaborne invasion in history occurred on this D Day and began the liberation of France and Western Europe and brought the Allies victory on the Western Front. Eighty years after Allied troops waded into the jaws of death on Omaha Beach and turned the tide of the war, an invasion has occurred which has disgraced the victory won at Normandy. Eighty years after a seaborne assault defeated the juggernaut of the Third Reich, the nightmare ghosts of the past have returned to avenge the victory. They wear differently colored armbands from their predecessors and march under differently colored banners, but their fearsome message is the same. It is a message of race hatred and race war and its target is the liberal democratic order. The Black Hammer Party is a black nationalist, black separatist organization founded in Atlanta, Georgia in 2019 by former members of the African People's Socialist Party. It is the latest iteration of the race based, race derivative Marxism which terrorized the world with Hitler's jackboots, and it has commenced an invasion of the West with the forces of a new fascist international. On May 3, 2021, it constructed a compound in the Rocky Mountains which it named Hammer City, and with this beachhead it commenced the first stage of its operation. On May 3, 2021, it announced that it had liberated two hundred acres of land in Beaver Pines, San Miguel County, Colorado, and proceeded to defend a position from which it would seek to bring Hitler's infamous torchlit processions back into power across America. The mascot of the Black Hammer Party is a raised fist clenching a hammer, and this latest edition of the hammer and sickle and the swastika shouts out a gospel of black communist power where its predecessors shouted their gospels of proletarian power and Aryan power, and shouts this latest Devil's creed with the same plan of world domination. Look at the American beachhead of the Black Hammer invasion and see a swampland of communist jobs, communist money, communist donations, communist landlords, communist tenants, communist housing, communist rent, communist farming, communist industry, ommunist conservation, communist food, communist healthcare and communist education. See black communists undertake to crush the capitals of the world beneath the iron heels of race war and class war. See black communists spread a virus which contaminates the land and renders people unable to think, see or hear reality. See black communists wield police truncheons and beat up white people. See black communists peddle totalitarian dictatorship as the highest form of human liberation. See black communists colonize, enslave and impoverish people and turn back the hands of time to the nameless eons of prehistory. See black communists confiscate private property in the name of the black poor and the black working class. See black communists descend into depths of brutality and eradicae the voices of freedom in their midst. See black communists reject civilization and seek a return to the land in the manner of animals. See black communists tear up the streets in protest against capitalism. See black communists proclaim that the holocaust against the Jews was justified because it eradicated a class of white, capitalist, Western colonizers. See black communists proclaim that they stay warm at nights by burning copies of Anne Frank's diary. See black communists hone their skills in agitating mobs and committing acts of violence, and occupy homes, schools, offices and communities. See black communists condemn capitalism as a system of suffering and exploitation of the proletariat and see them rob, expropriate and vandalize the property of employers and owners of businesses. See black communists don masks, body armor and protective equipment and enter fields of battle in a war against liberal peace, liberal order and liberal government. See black communists lead indigenous people in a crusade to halt the wheels of progress and enlightenment. See black communists justify mass murder in the name of racial justice. See black communists assume control over the infrastructure of civilization and smash the power plants of industrial and technological development. See black communists plan, design, build and engineer a regime which has abolished the rule of law as it has buried individual rights with the bulldozers of tribalism. See black communists fight the free world, extinguish cities of shining lights, and lower the curtain on the future of mankind: "Hammer City is Black Hammer Party’s latest project!

- Building cities for all people of color to be free (no discrimination of nationality, gender, age, mental/physical differences, etc)
- Jobs, housing, food, healthcare
- No cops, no rent, no coronavirus and no white people
- Returning the land to Indigenous people
- Building Hammer Cities all over the world

Back This Project! Hundreds of people have already backed this project! The project has raised $90,000 in under 1 year. Make liberation for colonized people a reality! Hammer City is more than a multinational, sustainable city: it’s liberated land. We can’t wait to see you there! Land back!
What is Hammer City? Stop living paycheck to paycheck. Have a secure life with work, free housing, food, healthcare, and education.

We’re building a city for poor and working class colonized people to have full control over our lives! Colonized people are people of color and the term colonized people acknowledges our history, not just our skin color. Our people have suffered through generations of Colonialism: slavery, war, and poverty! The Problem is Colonialism Colonialism uses our suffering to make others rich. We need an immediate response to all of its symptoms like police brutality, Coronavirus, evictions, and poverty! This system will never provide for poor people of color who work to survive --colonized people! Since colonialism has ripped us of our relationship to the land, we need to reconnect to the land to heal. Fighting Back by Building Up.

In the past year, Black Hammer Party gave out 250,000 pieces of personal protective equipment (PPE) to protect colonized people from coronavirus, distributed food, fought police brutality, and led protests in the streets. Still, this is not enough. We want to build communities for our people, without rent, coronavirus, cops, or colonizers (white people)--a place for colonized people to finally thrive. No more worrying about if you got enough money for groceries this month, about which friend is going to be murdered by the police next, or about when the landlord is going to show up with the eviction notice! This victory cannot be achieved without every person who donates--whether $1 or $100--and shares this campaign. Bring This Future to Life! We are recruiting all colonized people as members to take on this project! Hammer Cities need people with all kinds of skills and we are recruiting all colonized people as members! If you have knowledge about:

- Sustainable farming
- Water conservation
- Holistic healthcare
- Renewable energy
- Design & engineering
- Laws & city planning

Any skills you got, we want you! Be a part of building this new world!" (Build Hammer Cities, blackhammer.org). The seabed is the netherworld lying at the bottom of the ocean. Across this abyssal plain, animals burrow and attach themselves to rocks, while scavengers consume dead, dying and decayed matter. From this deep, unfathomable floor, monsters have ascended and commenced an invasion of mankind. Led by their fuhrer, August Romain Jr, aka Gazi Kodzo, they have established a landing base in Beaver Pines, San Miguel County, Colorado. Raised fists, body camouflage, bullet proof vests, bullet ridden lots, and a militia armed with AR-15s: this is the landing base called Hammer City and it comprises stage one of the black Marxist war against civilization.

THE FEVER

Malaria is an infectious disease which affects people and animals. Borne by mosquitos, the symptoms include fever, jaundice, seizures and convulsions. The disease is widespread in the tropical and subtropical world and kills hundreds of thousands of people every year in Asia, Latin America and subSaharan Africa. In a land above the equator, in the world's arsenal of freedom and the world's lighthouse for the downtrodden and the oppressed stranded on seas of tyranny and fear, a malarial fever has struck, transmitted by the bites of the mob in whose bloodstream multiply the parasites of gender, race and class politics. Founded in the eighteenth century as a child of the Enlightenment, founded on the battlefields of Lexington and Concord, founded by The Shot Heard Round The World which marked the outbreak of war between Britain and the Patriot Militias in Britain's thirteen colonies, the United States of America has been stricken by a moral and political fever two hundred years after George Washington led his forces onto victory in the New World. The collapse took one hundred years to come to fruition after the initial bite at the dawn of the twentieth century, and has transformed the nation into a white hot inferno blazing with the fires of Marxism and its offshoots, voted upon unanimously by the nation's mobs. After the first bite of communism, traveling in the nation's bloodstream under the guise of progressivism, the parasite matured, evolved, reproduced and brought forth race and gender generations which have placed the nation into a death dance around a mad maypole marked by violent upheavals and involuntary contractions. After one hundred years of steady communist and neocommunist penetration into every sector of society, America can no longer think, see or hear reality, and has moved its its soul and limbs to attack, to persecute and to maul to death the last remaining champions of reason and sanity in its midst. After one hundred years of taking deep drafts of one hundred proof Marxism in all its race, gender and classic varieties, America has burst into flames and moved to incinerate the preeminent voice of the opposition and the number one national enemy of the far left establishment. A fever is raging across America and has targeted Donald Trump, the forty fifth president of the United States, from 2017 to 2021, for total destruction. The path of the fever has claimed the political career of Trump and seen a weaponization of the law without precedent in the nation's history. The fever. After eighteen months of televised, one sided, People's Court style hearings, a congressional committee chosen by the Democrat Party accused Trump of inciting insurrection in a mass attack on the United States Capital January 6, 2021 which sought to stop the certification of Joe Biden as president. The committee referred its findings to the Justice Department. The department launched a criminal investigation into the January 6 attacks and launched the largest police investigation in the nation's history. One thousand people who were involved in the attacks were sent to jail. The reality. Unconstitutional actions in Pennsylvania, Georgia, Michigan, Wisconsin and Arizona resulted in the fraudulent victory of Joe Biden. The United States Constitution is clear and unequivocal in its requirement that state legislatures alone can make rules for choosing presidential electors: "Each State shall appoint, in such Manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a Number of Electors, equal to the whole Number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress." (Article II, Section 1, Clause 2). The United States Constitution was not upheld by the United States Supreme Court, which dismissed the case Texas vs Pennsylvania claiming that Georgia, Michigan, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin violated the constitution by changing election rules through nonlegislative means. It dismissed the case on the grounds that "Texas lacks Article III standing to sue other states over how they conduct their own elections." In reality, every person and every state in the union has a natural, general standing to challenge illegal government actions because such actions, actually or potentially, violate everyone's rights. The United States Supreme Court's refusal to uphold the constitution resulted in the victory of Joe Biden, as it foreclosed all peaceful means of redress of grievances, and made the attempted insurrection led by Donald Trump a moral and constitutional necessity: "Every one of these states were targeted by Democrats. Every one of these states violated the United States Constitution, Article II, Section 1, Clause 2. Every one of them, because changes were made to their election systems not by the state legislature, but by other public officials. That’s seventy three Electoral College votes. This is why Donald Trump won the election. If the federal Constitution had not been violated, yes, Donald Trump would be president of the United States today. This is why you should be furious with the United States Supreme Court, that had as its duty, as its sworn responsibility to insist that the states comply with the federal Constitution under Article II, Section 1, Clause 2, and that any changes made outside that clause, by governors, secretaries of states, by courts, federal or state, by election boards or other bureaucrats, will be deemed unconstitutional. The Supreme Court had a case in Pennsylvania before a single vote was counted, they had a case [alleging unconstitutional changes to election laws] and they didn’t take it up. The Democrats made these changes, they plotted, they planned, they litigated, they pressured, they lobbied, and now we have, if he’s sworn in, Joe Biden, who will be an illegitimate president of the United States in every meaning of that word, illegitimate." (Yes, It Was a Stolen Election by John Perazzo, quoting Mark Levin). The fever. Federal prosecutors accused Donald Trump of acting illegally in seeking to overturn his loss to Joe Biden in Georgia in the 2020 presidential election. They cite a telephone call between Trump and state's senior election official, Secretary of State Brad Reffensperger, on January 2, 2021: "I just want to find 11,780 votes." The reality. Trump's claim that 11,780 votes were cast for him and were not counted is corroborated by the fact that 175,000 votes were fraudulently cast for Joe Biden: "In Georgia, illegal ballots were cast by, or in the name of: more than 2,500 felons; 66,247 underage voters; 2,423 unregistered voters; 4,926 individuals who had failed to register prior to the state's voter registration deadline; 395 individuals who voted in two states; 20,311 voters who had moved out of state and thus were no longer eligible to vote in Georgia; 40,279 people who had moved across county lines in Georgia without re-registering in their new county of residence; 30,000 to 40,000 people whose absentee ballots lacked a valid, verifiable signature; and at least 1,043 individuals whose voter registrations claimed postal facilities as their home address and disguised their box numbers as apartment numbers. Almost all of the people in this latter category were absentee voters who cast their ballots early." (Yes, It Was a Stolen Election by John Perazzo). The fever. On March 30, 2023, Donald Trump was indicted by a Manhattan grand jury on thirty four counts of falsifying business records. He was charged with violating New York State penal law in order to "cover up crimes relating to the 2016 election, to "hide damaging information from the voting public" and to "undermine the integrity of the 2016 election", in the words of Manhattan District Attorney Alvin Bragg. The reality. Federal election law violations are outside the jurisdiction of state courts and candidates for federal office cannot be prosecuted in cases involving state election laws. The fever. On May 9, 2023, a jury in New York City found Donald Trump liable for sexual battery and defamation against E. Jean Carroll, and awarded her two million dollars in damages for the alleged sexual battery and three million dollars in damages for the Trump's alleged defamation in claiming her allegations of sexual assault were false. The reality. The accusation by Carroll was unsupported by witnesses or physical evidence, was not reported to the police, and was lifted from an episode of a popular television series: "Carroll's description of the alleged incident is very similar to a 2012 episode of Law & Order: Special Victims Unit. In that episode, titled Theatre and Tricks, an individual talks about a rape fantasy in Bergdorf Goodman—the same store Carroll claims the incident took place. 'Role-play took place in the dressing room of Bergdorf's. While she was trying on lingerie I would burst in,' the character in the episode said. According to Carroll, the two were in the lingerie section, and Trump allegedly assaulted her in the dressing room. Carroll claimed to be 'aware' of the episode. According to the New York Post, Carroll said the similarities between what she claims happened to her and the show's plot were 'amazing.' 'An amazing coincidence?' Trump's lawyer asked. 'Yes, it's astonishing,' Carroll replied, ultimately denying her allegation was based on a television show." (Trump Lawyer Confronts Trump Accuser E. Jean Carroll: Rape Allegations Similar To Law & Order SVU Episode by Hannah Bleau). The fever. On June 8, 2023, a federal grand jury indicted Donald Trump on multiple counts of violating the Espionage Act, including unauthorized possession of classified material, obstruction of justice, concealing documents and making false statements to law enforcement authorities. The material included details of America's nuclear weapons programs, American military vulnerabilities and America's plans for retaliatory military attacks. The indictment contains a portentous warning: "The disclosure of these classified documents could put at risk the national security of the United States, foreign relations, the safety of the United States military and human sources, and the continued viability of sensitive intelligence collection methods." The indictment contains a recording of Trump talking a writer, a publisher and two members of his staff on July 21, 2021 about a secret American plan to attack Iran: "Trump told the individuals that the plan was 'highly confidential' and 'secret'. Trump also said, 'As president I could have declassified it,' and 'Now, I can't, you know, but this is still a secret." The indictment contains a recording of a meeting with a political aide in August 2021 in which Trump shows the aide a secret map of another country and tells him that a military operation there has been thus far unsuccessful. The indictment accuses Trump of directing the storage and transportation of boxes of government documents while the authorities were seeking their return. The indictment accuses Trump of moving the boxes from his home in Mar a Lago to his golf club in New Jersey just before the FBI search of Mar a Lago and without the knowledge of his lawyers. The indictment contains statements by one of Trump's attorneys in which he recommends lying to authorities and evading subpeonas for documents in his possession, and refuses to give his lawyers accesss to documents: "1. I don't want anybody looking through my boxes, I really don't, I don't want you looking through my boxes. 2. Well, what if we, what happens if we just don't respond at all or don't play ball with them?. 3. Wouldn't it be better if we just told them we don't have anything here? 4. Well isn't it better if there are no documents?" The gravity of Trump's alleged crimes is asserted by David Super, a law professor at Georgetown University: "The biggest obstacle in cases of this kind is proving intent. But the indictment provides an enormous volume of very specific information showing Mr Trump's personal awareness and involvement, including his proposing that various statements be made to investigators that he knew were false." ('What If We Don't Play Ball?' Why Trump Indictment Could Be So Damaging by Anthony Zurcher, BBC News, June 9, 2023, quoting Super). The reality. Donald Trump, as president of the United States, possessed plenary powers to own, use and dispose of documents in the executive branch. He either possessed these powers or the words "executive power" and "commander in chief", contained in Article II of the Constitution, are not there and mean nothing: "The executive Power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America." "The President shall be Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the Militia of the several States, when called into the actual Service of the United States." Trump's statements recommending obstructing and lying to authorities prove only that Trump himself was unaware of his own plenary powers under the Constitution. Executive documents are the property of the president; the president has an absolute and unqualified right to transport or conceal them in any manner he chooses; and federal statutes which claim that he does not, and claim that executive documents are the property of the government, are unconstitutional. There are two tiers of justice in America: one for Donald Trump and one for members of the establishment. Joe Biden kept thousands of government documents at the University of Delaware, in Chinatown, Washington DC, at the University of Pennsylvania, and on the floor of the garage at his home. There was no prosecution of Joe Biden. When he was vice president, Joe Biden received a bribe of five million dollars from an executive at the Ukrainian natural gas firm Burisma Holdings in exchange for giving Burisma oil rights in America, allowing Burisma to invest in an American oil company, and ending the investigation into corruption at Burisma conducted by prosecutor Viktor Shokin, by having Shokin dismissed. The payment to Biden and his son Hunter through multifarious bank accounts is described by the executive to an FBI informant: "Five million dollars for one Biden, $5 million for the other Biden. I paid the Bidens through so many different bank accounts that anyone investigating the case wouldn't be able to unravel this for at least ten years." (Report: FBI Doc Says Burisma Exec Paid Biden $5M In Alleged Bribery Scheme by Jack Gournell). There was no prosecution of Joe Biden. Hillary Clinton, when she was secretary of state under the Obama administration, deleted 33,000 classified emails in her unauthorized private server and eliminated secret data contained in her telephone by smashing the telephone with a hammer, in an attempt to conceal the illegal use of her office to raise money for the Clinton Foundation. There was no prosecution of Hillary Clinton. Johann Jakob Wick was a Swiss painter and Protestant clergyman in the sixteenth century. His most famous work is The Burning Of Three Witches, which illustrates the terrifying mania which gripped Europe and America from 1450 to 1750, and resulted in the execution of 50,000 innocent people as witches. Three centuries after the last witch was killed in Switzerland, the sickness has returned to America and claimed the life of Donald Trump.

BLACK POWER RIDES THE HIGH SEAS

Octopuses are phenomenal creatures. They can alter their size and shape and squeeze through small spaces. They have eight limbs which can regenerate. They have three hearts which pump blue, copper rich blood. Last but not least, they are able to change their colors, to camouflage themselves, to deceive their enemies, and to blend into their surroundings. The new millennium has seen the entrenchment of a red ideological octopus in the West and the consolidation of a communist establishment. Voted into power by the raised fists and incessant clamoring of the masses, this octopus is able to change its colors to appeal to different sectors of the population. Its tentacular movements champion classic proletarian Marxism, gender Marxism, gay and lesbian Marxism, environmentalist Marxism and race Marxism. The tentacles of race Marxism have invaded the high seas and brought forth a monster from the depths. This is the monster of black power and it has taken hold of a classic literary fairy tale by world renowned author Hans Christian Andersen and transformed it into a Bible and Watchtower tract for Black Lives Matter. Published in 1837 as part of a collection of fairy tales for children, The Little Mermaid is the story of a sea creature with the head and upper body of a woman and the tail of fish who seeks to give up her life in the sea and acquire a human soul. In 2023, Walt Disney Pictures produced a picture for the red octopus which consigned Andersen's classic tale to oblivion as it broadcast political propaganda into the untutored minds of innocent children. On May 8, 2023, at the Dolby Theater in Los Angeles, The Little Mermaid premiered to the wild applause of the public and rave reviews from the critics, and went on to gross 338 million dollars worldwide and fatten the profits of Walt Disney's Marxist management and manufacturing machine. See the promotion of racial balkanization in a crusade to destroy liberal enlightenment civilization: "Everything is social engineering in the new live action version of The Little Mermaid. It changes Hans Christian Andersen's Danish fairy tale—a touchstone of Western culture—and revokes its preeminence, reworking its amphibious Scandinavian heroine's image to resemble that of a biracial American teenager (Ariel, played by pop singer Halle Bailey) that suits contemporary, racialized politics. This new version of The Little Mermaid reboots the unaccountably popular 1989 animated version to illustrate that Disney's indoctrination credo is no longer only for entertainment. This is how Millennial industries teach stealth lessons on racial identity that also reject Western tradition. But The Little Mermaid's lesson plan is disingenuous. When smiley, mop stressed Ariel saves shipwrecked human passengers and sees Prince Eric (Anglo-Saxon Jonah Hauer-King), she is awestruck. Her infatuation traduces the complexities of interracial, interspecies and cross cultural attraction. Screenwriter David Magee (Life of Pi, Finding Neverland), dismisses Andersen's cultural foundation. But Magee's notions about racial integration are vapid. Magee and director Rob Marshall follow Disney's multicultural program to win diversity, inclusion, and equity (DIE) points. (Ariel's six mermaid sisters—presumably from six different mothers—represent global ethnicities.) This virtue signaling merely clutters the fantasy—as do the underwater F/X, designed to impress viewers with Avatar style distraction. Ariel's Pinocchio like desire to be an ambulatory human, joining Prince Eric, lacks the relatable specifics of social integration that distinguished Neil Jordan's superb Celtic mermaid myth Ondine. Such details matter if Disney is being honest about its hope and change agenda, or if a fairy tale is to work as a spiritual, psychological or moral metaphor. Instead, The Little Mermaid follows the formula of Disney's Black Is King (2020), Beyonce's racialist showcase and live action reboot of The Lion King, and of Disney's and Marvel's pandering Black Panther movies. There is, indeed, a revoke and change agenda in this specious 'family' extravaganza. Disney transforms its 1989 animated version of Andersen's story in such a way that its enchantment is deracinated. More care has gone into aquarium style realism than into considering what the fantasy of otherness means. By teaching lessons in revamped biracial identity, The Little Mermaid also instills the new segregation. An ABC Disney promotional program featured a black child who says, 'She looks like me,' in response to the film's advertising hype. And that's the essential intent of using Bailey's Ariel as an emblem of Disney's antiWestern 'diversity'. It's not just antiWestern, it's also antiart—against the idea of culture that connects us to others. The Little Mermaid is the ultimate example of selling racism to the public under the pretense of 'looks like me' representation. At least Bailey is no Quvanzhane Wallis (the child who was nominated for an Oscar for Beasts Of The Southern Wild), whose unprepossessing presence almost single handedly wrecked the black remake of Annie. Bailey sings and cavorts amusingly; when Ariel frolics with her marine playmates, Bailey uncannily imitates that moue of animated Disney princesses. Her real life smile improves on the awful, cartoony The Princess and the Frog (2009): That was Disney's first black exploitation cartoon, made on the presumption that viewers need mirror images of themselves—even cartoon images with ersatz musical stylings. Here, new tuneless songs by Lin-Manuel Miranda don't disguise the project's dull, Hamilton based political correctness and race baiting. None of it justifies the ironies of Ariel's anthem, Part Of Your World, which sentimentalizes her anthropomorphic, transhumanist longings. That song doesn't belong in a film that promotes the era's social fragmentation and repeats fatuous antagonisms—burlesqued by Melissa McCarthy playing the sea world's villainous white witch octopus Ursula. McCarthy's disingenuous imitation of the drag queen Divine is the experiment's necessary token Disney queer. Woe to us if this racialized The Little Mermaid is a hit. It's more proof that if Hollywood succeeds in pushing its 'looks like me' movement of cultural narcissism, there will be no turning back from segregation." (The Little Mermaid's Revoke And Change Agenda by Armond White). The Kraken is a legendary sea monster which swims in the myths, superstitions and literature of the world. It appears in travelogues, in the accounts of bishops, missionaries, explorers and zoologists, and in the pages of novels by Jules Verne and Victor Hugo. This fifteen meter long man killer has come alive in the twenty first century in the surging currents of Disney's live action studios. A black actress hired to play a character who is red haired and white in the original story. A black actress hired to inject black power into a classic children's tale. A black actress hired to promote a race Marxist agenda. A black actress hired, not on the basis of merit or versimilitude, but on the basis of diversity and inclusion. A black actress playing the character Ariel in The Little Mermaid has come alive as the Kraken and devoured cinemas throughout the world.

RED TERROR ENGULFS GERMANY

Time: Autumn 1977. Place: Germany. Hanns Martin Schleyer, president of the Confederation of German Employers and the Federation of German Industries, is killed by the Red Army Faction. Lufthansa Flight 181 is hijacked by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, and the hijackers demand the release of ten members of the RAF plus fifty million US dollars. Siegfried Bubeck, the attorney general of Germany, is killed by the RAF, along with his driver and a court officer. Jurgen Ponto, chairman of the Dresdner Bank, is killed by the RAF. Forty years after the notorious German Autumn cast a pall of red terror across the nation and plunged civilized people into a wintertime of anarchy and violence, the communists are back in business and have revived the nightmare ghosts of the past. On April 20 1998, the RAF faxed a letter to Reuters news agency, signed with its trademark Soviet red star containing an automatic weapon, and declared that the group had dissolved. Twenty five years after the dissolution of this fearsome gun barrel of communism, the arsenal has been restocked, reloaded and recommissioned, and the war against Germany's liberal order has begun anew. Today's resurgent communist terror movement has continued the battles of the past, the battles fought by communists during the Weimar Republic, fought by the communists' brothers, the national socialists during the Third Reich, fought by the communist regime of East Germany, and fought by communists in postwar West Germany, the battles fought by the voices of totalitarianism of all stripes and varieties, the aim of which is the overthrow of Germany's free institutions and constitutional government. The cancer of communist terror is metastisizing in twenty first century Germany, having returned from remission from a bloodstream it never left, and has again placed the nation in the grip of fear. Look at Germany today and see communist criminal organizations take control of the streets. See the voices of freedom condemned as right wing extremists and subjected to grievous bodily harm. See tens of thousands of brazen, professional hoodlums plan and carry out to the last detail attacks on innocent people in the name of communism. See the threat and the reality of communist violence soaring into the stratosphere. See communists place the forces of law and order under siege. See communists occupy and overrun private property. See communists smash offices and businesses. See criminally motivated crimes justified by communists as politically motivated action. See communist criminal political theories promoted in classrooms and paraded in the public square. See the communist daggers of class hatred target for destruction the order and peace of a free society. See communist activists set fire to the nation's basic laws. See communist climate protest groups blow up the industrial infrastructure of society. See communists justify the use of brute force in the name of antiimperialism and popular liberation. See the nation spiral out of control into a vortex of mindless communist violence. See communists justify acts murder and mayhem as acts of civil disobedience and the protection of civil rights. See communists justify use of violence and intimidation against the civilian populations in the name of fighting fascism. See communists block streets, squares, homes and offices. See communists obstruct the roads and arteries of civilization. See Berlin, Hamburg and Leipzig transformed into headquarters of communist revolution. See the final generation of communists wear black masks and plunge the final dagger into the heart of Germany and bury its freedom for all time to come: "Twenty eight year old student Lina E was sentenced to five years and three months in prison last week for causing bodily harm and belonging to a criminal organization. She and her three codefendants were found guilty of attacking and seriously injuring suspected right wing extremists. These acts, the judge said, showed how far militant 'antifascist' groups could go. It is the first such case in many years, but Germany's domestic intelligence agency says left wing extremism is growing. In its latest report, published last year, the Office for the Protection of the Constitution (BfV) recorded a rise in the number of 'violence oriented' left wing extremists from around 700 to 10,300 from 2020 to 2021. 'Acts of violence are carried out in a planned and targeted manner by small groups acting conspicuously and professionally,' the 2022 BfV report said, before concluding that the potential threat 'remains high.' According to the intelligence agency, left wing violence was directed 'primarily at the police and right wing extremists, but also at business enterprises, especially in the real estate sector.' In addition, some members of the militant leftist scene have made attempts to infiltrate climate protest groups. BKA President Holger Munch described all politically motivated crimes as a cause for concern, particularly hate crimes on social media. 'They are targeting our free democratic basic order and endanger social peace,' he told a press conference when he presented the report in May. Meanwhile, the domestic intelligence agency report saw a 'high level of radicalization' among violence oriented left wing extremists. Some members of the scene 'commit their own, meticulously planned, and often extremely brutal acts in small groups.' The BKA describes the cities of Berlin, Hamburg, and Leipzig as hotspots. The conviction of Lina E, who lives in Leipzig, caused political debates this week, with Germany's Interior Minister Nancy Faeser welcoming the court verdict: 'This spiral of radicalization and violence must not be allowed to continue.' " (Left Wing Extremism In Germany: How Much Of A Threat Is It? by Marcel Furstenau, Deutsche Welle, June 3, 2023). Look at Germany today and see communist demonstrators battle police and spread panic in the streets. See cities reduced to theaters of communist war. See communists don black masks and black clothing and dig the grave of the nation with the shovels of class hatred and violence. See communists smash up public squares in the name of freedom of assembly. See communists rampage against security forces and storm the ramparts of law and order. See communists fill up jail cells to overflowing and then flood out onto the streets. See communists march against the peace, order and government of free people and burn down the citadels of progress and enlightenment. See communists condemn supporters of capitalism as nazis and neonazis and annul the right of free speech under the banners of antifascism. See communists mark the days on the calendar, mark every day of the year, with the dagger cross of death and hang the nation a thousand times from the gallows of the party leaders and the people's commissars. See communists place Germany on a train marked totalitarian tyranny and send it careening down into the final, terrifying chapter of the nation: "Several police officers were injured in the eastern German city of Leipzig on Saturday in clashes with left wing protestors. Leipzig police spokesman Olaf Hoppe described the situation as 'very dynamic,' with 'sometimes massive clashes here in the south of Leipzig.' He said that 'roughly 1,500 people' turned up to the demonstration, even though several courts had refused to authorize it. 'According to our estimates, one third of them were either inclined towards violence, or were actively seeking violence,' Hoppe said. 'We observed numerous cases of people intentionally obscuring their faces, which is an offense in and of itself.' Hoppe said that as the demonstration grew and as people who appeared to seek violence gathered, organizers and police negotiated for around an hour seeking a way to allow the banned demonstration to go ahead 'in the name of freedom of assembly.' Police had tried to keep the demonstration, originally envisioned as a march from the south of town to the main train station, contained in an area around the Alexis Schumann Platz square on Karl Liebknecht Strasse. 'Even before these talks were concluded, some at times massive attacks were launched by individual demonstrators against our security forces,' Hoppe said." (Germany: Police Break Up Banned Far Left Protest In Leipzig, Deutsche Welle, June 3, 2023). At 236 Reichenhainer Street in the city of Chemnitz is the Chemnitz Detention Center. For two and a half years before she was released pending the outcome of her appeal, Lena E was confined in this jail. Lena E founded an organization which conducted a campaign of violence against the opponents of communism, whom it labeled as fascists and neonazis, and used hammers, iron bars and baseball bats in its attacks. Lena's organization was an efficiently run terror machine which planned its deadly attacks down to the last detail and used disposable mobile phones, a division of labor and scouts to surveil targets: "This was a whole group of people planning attacks so minutely that they were using the appropriate technology, like disposable mobile phones. They had scouts, who spied on the victims. The tasks within the group were very precisely divided up. The evidence shows that the group did not merely engage in street fighting but sought to seriously injure or kill their victims. Terrorism is defined as using politically motivated violence to spread fear and horror either within the general population or within a certain group of people." (German Left Wing Extremist Lina E. Found Guilty by Ben Knight, quoting Hendrik Hansen, professor at the Federal University of Applied Administrative Sciences, Deutsche Welle, May 31, 2023). During Lena E's time in jail, she was confined with Beate Zschape, founder of the National Socialist Underground. These figures represent two sides of a coin of terror in circulation throughout Germany. Two sides, a classic Marxist side and a race Marxist side, united against liberal democracy. A coin which fills the pocket of every German and signals the moral bankruptcy of the nation.

OBAMA-BIDEN SCANDALS SHOCK THE WORLD

In the early eighteenth century, the British government was in a debt crisis and was unable to pay its bondholders. In 1711, as a way out, it created the South Sea Company. The official purpose of the company was to trade African slaves to the Spanish colonies of the Americas south of the Equator. The real operations of the company were as follows. The holders of British government bonds sold their bonds to the company in exchange for shares. The company collected an annual interest on the bonds from the government. The company passed on the interest to shareholders in the form of dividends. Owning shares in the company became wildly popular. The stock price of the company increased from one hundred pounds in 1719 to one thousand pounds in August 1720. But by the end of the year, there was a crash back to one hundred pounds. The bursting of the South Sea Bubble was the greatest financial scandal in history. Company directors were brought before the British parliament and accused of treason and fraud. Britain's chancellor of the exchequer was locked up in the Tower of London. For three centuries, this crash, caused by insane gambling during the early days of the stock market, has been the preeminent symbol of crisis and scandal in the financial world. Three centuries later, the political counterpart to the South Sea scandal occurred in the world's arsenal and bankroller of liberty and became the greatest political scandal in the history of democracy. It enacted a tragedy of epic, world historical proportions because of where it happened, and this place, this nation, this state, this society, the United States of America, became a byword and signpost of the decline and fall of Western civilization. The scandal was executive branch illegality committed under the administrations of Barack Obama and Joe Biden. The record of crimes committed forms a serpentine, hangman's noose which has strangled and suffocated constitutional government in the nation and left it unable to function. Item. The Federal Bureau of Investigation became under President Barack Obama a weapon of communist enforcement and Marxist revolution on par with the most notorious secret police forces in history, on par with the Cheka and KGB in Russia, the Stasi in East Germany and the Gestapo in National Socialist Germany. The FBI became an enemy of the free society it was founded to protect. Under Joe Biden, the FBI attacked Donald Trump's home in Florida and laid out and photographed documents which Trump, as the holder of executive power and the commander in chief of the nation, had a right under Article II of the Constitution to keep and declassify as his property. The FBI rounded up thousands of patriotic, law abiding Americans across the nation who had taken part in an attempted insurrection on January 6, 2021 to stop the fraudulent certification of Joe Biden. The FBI arrested thousands of people who had stormed the United States Capital Building because they had seen evidence of election fraud and sought to stop the staging of a coup. The fraud they saw was as plain as noonday; they saw it late on Election Night, when President Trump was leading Joe Biden by 100,000 votes in Wisconsin, 300,000 votes in Michigan, 300,000 votes in Georgia and 700,000 votes in Pennsylvania, and all four states then suspended their vote counts simultaneously, and by the early morning hours of the following day, Wisconsin had changed in Biden's favor, and was followed thereafter by Michigan, Georgia and Pennsylvania; and this fraud they saw engulfed the nation in a permanent black night. The FBI refused to investigate Joe Biden's influence peddling operations and acceptance of bribery around the world, while it gave credence to false allegations that Donald Trump was a Russian agent made in a dossier paid for by the Hillary Clinton campaign. The FBI made a special trip to Delaware to retrieve Hunter Biden's laptop for the purpose of concealing from the public the evidence of Joe Biden's corrupt activities contained in its emails. The FBI retrieved the diary of Joe Biden's diary Ashley in order to conceal from the public the daughter's sexual interests: "But I have always been boy crazy. I remember pulling up my skirt in 2nd grade and showing the boys my underpants. Hypersexualized @ a young age. What is this due to? Was I molested. I think so--I can't remember specifics but I do remember trauma--I remember not liking the Woolzacks house, I remember somewhat being sexualized with Caroline; I remember having sex with friends @ a young age; showers with my dad (probably not appropriate); Being turned on when I wasn't supposed to be." Beneath the banner of its motto, Fidelity, Bravery, Integrity, the FBI proclaims its official mission: "Protect the American people and uphold the Constitution of the United States". The reality, dark and monstrous, an agency of defense of the far left establishment and attack on the opposition, made America disappear: "What is the translation of the abbreviation FBI? It is the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The term investigation is in its title, its roots, its purpose. So to tell the Congress directly, and the public indirectly, it cannot comment on an investigation to is declare, in reality, the FBI is a secret agency of government. After all, the FBI took on a sitting president after trying to tank his election. If government is allowed to destroy candidates for office, the republic is no more, and that is precisely where the Democratic Party is taking the country. In other words, the FBI has morphed into an enemy of freedom. The agency became totally politicized when Janet Reno ran things at DOJ, and since then its every move is suspect. When the FBI stormed into President Trump's Florida home, we all saw the staged photograph of a handful of documents, carefully laid out and photographed by agents. The agents ostensibly were there to secure documents, not stage politically charged press availabilities. That single photograph revealed the evil underbelly of the agency's leadership. Now the FBI refuses even to talk to lawmakers about a document that allegedly advances a case of bribery against a sitting president, who was, at the time, vice president. Compare the silence to protect Joe Biden to the handling of the fake Clinton paid for dossier. It was leaks and cheers and smears all round! It was the FBI who went to Delaware to confiscate, and hide, Hunter Biden's laptop. Had copies of the content not been made and provided to key political figures, the FBI would have buried it. It was the FBI that was sent to retrieve the diary of the president's daughter, not to preserve it, but to bury it. It was the FBI that hunted down Americans who walked to the Capitol January 6, 2021, and many of those Americans have disappeared into a judicial jungle. It is with great sadness that more and more informed political observers are concluding that the disintegration of America is at hand, and while its survival is the most important issue facing the world today, its future cannot be secure under the constant assault of Marxist revolutionaries." (The "F" In FBI Does Not Stand For Freedom by Mike Pottage). Item. When he was vice president, Joe Biden ran a global influence peddling operation. He received millions of dollars in bribes from foreign nationals. He was bought off, paid off and suborned to change government policy. He was the head of a family, a clan and a tribe whose specialty was criminal schemes, abuse of office and control of the highest levers of political power: "The insider behind claims Joe Biden was involved in a criminal bribery scheme has been revealed as a 'highly credible' FBI source. The informant was previously used by the bureau in multiple probes into the Obama administration, with a bombshell report indicating that a whistleblower attempted to shed light on their claims that then Vice President Biden orchestrated a $5 million bribery plot with a foreign national. It is alleged that Biden was involved in the scheme where money was given in exchange for influence of US government policy, a source confirmed to DailyMail.com. A person familiar with the revelations told the outlet that the source was a 'preexisting' FBI informer who has been used in multiple investigations separate from the Biden information. Several high ranking officials were approached by a whistleblower about the damaging information, including House Oversight Committee Chairman James Comer and Republican Senator Chuck Grassley. They alleged that the FBI was in possession of a document from June 2020 that detailed the source's allegations about Biden. This included a 'precise description of how the alleged criminal scheme was employed as well as its purpose', the whistleblower claimed. The whistleblower told Fox News that the source was used by the FBI for 'at least several years' before they came forward with the bribery allegations. Internal vetting of the source by the agency found him to be 'highly credible'. " (Whistleblower Claiming Biden WAS involved In A $5m Criminal Bribery Scheme With A Foreign National While He Was Vice President Is A 'Highly Credible' FBI Source That Agency Has Used Since The Obama Administration by Will Potter, Daily Mail, June 4, 2023). On May 15, 2023, Special Prosecutor John Durham released a report which exposed the Department of Justice and the FBI as the praetorian guards of an unconstitutional regime. It exposed daggers unsheathed and gleaming with corruption which manufactured a narrative of Russian collusion against Donald Trump: "The FBI and the Department of Justice failed to uphold their mission of strict fidelity to the law and senior FBI personnel displayed a serious lack of analytical rigor towards the information that they received, especially information received from politically affiliated persons and entities." In the twenty first century, the weapons of official lawlessness have stabbed the nation in the back and carved out the death date for civilization: now.

DEBT CEILING SURRENDER IN AMERICA

On the moors of Yorkshire Dales in England there is a cairn. Its plaque reads: Mossdale Memorial Cairn–Over The Place In The Cave Where The Bodies Were Found. It marks the site of the deadliest caving incident in British history. On June 24, 1967, ten people entered the Mossdale Cavern and six did not come back. The cave collapsed and rescue teams decided to leave the victims inside. Above the entrance to the cave the families placed a memorial plaque: In Everlasting Memory. Cave in: the collapse of a geologic formation which kills those trapped inside who are mining, tunneling, exploring or excavating. Cave in: the act of capitulaton, submission and surrender of a person or group under pressure. Since the dawn of the twentieth century, the voices of freedom in America have been caving in on a regular basis before the forces of mob pressure, which have demanded, as they demanded a thousand years before in ancient Rome, more government, more statism, more spending, more welfare and more redestribution of wealth. Cave ins by the voices of freedom occur during the final stages of civilization and this final stage commenced in the West a century ago. The twentieth century inaugurated the age of mysticism, mass politics and tribal religions peddling their wares under the names gender, race and class, and the present day marks the climax of this disease and the closure of Western civilization. The latest act of closure occurred on June 1, 2023, when the United States Senate passed the Fiscal Responsibility Act, after the House of Representatives had passed the bill on May 31, and after President Joe Biden and House Speaker Kevin McCarthy had reached an agreement on May 27. Before the looming shadow of caesar's latter day, American welfare state mob, those who claimed to be champions of freedom were champions in name only and stitched a white flag of surrender. On this flag were the following concessions. An agreement not to reduce current government spending. An agreement not to make the current debt ceiling of thirty one trillion dollars a constraint on future spending. An agreement not to constrain government spending by government income. An agreement not to limit government spending to income taxes. An agreement not to make tax dollars, as a first priority, pay the debts held by bondholders. An agreement not to obey the principles and practices of sound household management and not to pay down debts first. An agreement not to significantly reduce welfare expenses. The agreement not to place caps on the budget after 2025. An agreement not to establish work requirements for those on Medicaid and Temporary Assistance for Needy Families. An agreement not to significantly raise general work requirements for those on the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, and not to establish any work requirements whatever for able bodied military veterans and the able bodied homeless on SNAP. An agreement not significantly reduce funding for a new Internal Revenue Service army of agents whose remit is round the clock audits on productive, successful, hardworking Americans. An agreement not to rescind Joe Biden's plan to excuse college students from paying their loans and force taxpayers to pay them. An agreement not to roll back a welfare state juggernaut which has razed to ground the American house of constitutional government: "Speaker Kevin McCarthy sold out conservatives in the debt ceiling deal since it includes no cuts to current spending or to the Biden budget package. Reductions to future spending and to the rates of spending increases are not cuts to current spending. McCarthy ignored the budget package his House passed and sent to the Senate. He punted. A weakling. A CINO (Conservative in Name Only). If McCarthy just stood his ground without passing any bill, then the current ceiling would become the constraint on additional spending. Spending would be constrained by income. Spending could not exceed income--a concept unknown to Washington. McCarthy would do a better service for conservatives to pass no bill. None. Then Congress and the White House would be forced to limit spending to income (taxes and other federal revenues). Defaults? No, none. There will be no automatic defaults on debt just because the debt ceiling is not raised. None. Tax income will continue to flow into the government to pay debts and interest on those debts. Debts and interest on those debts would be paid first from tax revenues, just the same as how average Americans are forced to pay debts first from their income (mortgage gets paid first, loans get paid first). This is how states must operate since states cannot spend more than income by law. These politicians and pundits are gaslighting Americans. Scare tactics. Every Republican should vote no on the Biden/McCarthy deal. Leave the current debt level in place, and then see what happens. Lots of expenses would then be cut and debt obligations would still be paid. Congress and the White House would have no choices, except about what to cut. If the debt ceiling is not raised, then increasing spending based on an increased debt ceiling would not be an option. The choices/negotiations between McCarthy and Biden would be about what to cut now. And those are exactly the choices we want them to make." (The Debt Limit Deal Is A Bust! by Michael Master). The Fiscal Responsibility Act of 2023 is in reality a fiscal irresponsibility and statist protection act. It has disgraced Memorial Day, the commemoration of those who gave their lives in defense of freedom. It establishes no limit on the money the government can borrow and enables the government to borrow trillions of dollars in the future to finance socialism. Its does not revert the government to precovid spending levels. It maintains subsidies for environmental programs which seek to eliminate oil, natural gas, internal combustion automobiles and industrial civilization. It maintains subsidies for the attack on modern progress conducted in the name of a Green New Deal. It allows the latter day voices of caesar's mobs to advance their radical agenda and maintain their social welfare spending: "So first thing first, to the American people, Washington is doing it again. While you were celebrating Memorial Day, all of our men and women who gave their lives for this great nation, and you were spending time with your family and your friends, this town was cutting another crap deal that's going to put you more in debt with no real changes whatsoever. So the American people need to understand full and well, do not listen to the talking points. Do not listen to the cool phrases that are being thrown out in commercials, on CNN or FOX or MSNBC, because Washington is lying again. This bill has no cap on raising the debt. Just a date in the future. We have no idea what that number's going to look like. Some people are saying $4 trillion. Some people are saying $3.5 trillion. This bill in year one might cut $12 billion. If you just want to be generous. So who here thinks it's cool to cut $12 billion in exchange for $4 trillion? I don't think that's cool at all. This bill actually keeps the Biden baseline intact for the federal agencies. The Republicans in Congress have been saying for months that we need to get back to precovid spending levels. This bill canonizes postcovid spending levels brought to us by Joe Biden and the Democrats. This bill keeps all of Joe Biden's policies, all of Joe Biden's spending intact. This bill does nothing for the Green New Deal subsidies that are going to cripple our electric grid. So when Americans are trying to figure out that they went and bought this electric car that they were subsidized to buy, but when they plug it in, there's not enough electricity on the grid, that's because Washington subsidized all these Green New Deal projects and nobody stepped up to it except for the people behind me now. To my Republican colleagues, do not vote for this bill. I'm telling you right now, your voters back home will look at you and say, why did you vote for a bill that keeps all of Joe Biden's policies in place and all you did was raise the debt ceiling? They're going to tell you, why did you not stand up and demand that they go back to the table and renegotiate this deal?" (GOP Rep. Byron Donalds: Washington Is Lying To You Again On This Crap Debt Deal, posted by Tim Haines, RealClear Politics, May 30, 2023). On May 27, 2023, President Joe Biden and House Speaker Kevin McCarthy sat down to negotiate a deal to end the debt ceiling crisis. They placed freedom on the table and proceeded to slice it beyond recognition. They sliced it with a knife marked suspension of the debt ceiling until January 1, 2025, no reductions in government spending, continued student loan bailout, courtesy of the taxpayers, no significant reduction in funding for the IRS army of auditors of the people, no significant work requirements for adult SNAP recipients, continued Green New Deal assault on fossil fuels and American energy independence, more printing of money and more confiscation of wealth to finance the leviathan welfare state. By June 1, 2023, bipartisan legislation, endorsed by communists in the Republican and Democrat parties, implementing the deal reached by Biden and McCarthy, had been passed by both houses of the 118th United States Congress. Trillions of dollars of debt had buried the crumbs of freedom in America.

RELIGION REELECTED IN TURKEY

At the dawn of the twentieth century, the West entered an age of religion. It was the second age of religion the West had entered and it brought it full circle back to the original Dark Age in which the culture began a thousand years before. This new twentieth century Dark Age did not worship exclusively at the altars of God and Christ but replaced them with new idols forged in Satan's newest furnaces. While the old Satan made the masses bow down before one idol and one idol alone, God in Heaven, the new Satan made the masses bow down before a multiplicity idols who were God's heirs and successors on Earth. These new idols were worshiped under the names Society, State, Government, Party, Nation, Race, Ethnicity, Class, Gender and Mother Earth and they competed for obedience with the original God, who remained on the scene but was reduced in power and influence. The new Dark Age of the West, the second religiousness of a culture now entering its death throes, which had long since abandoned the values and ideals of the Age of Enlightenment, swept into the twentieth first century upon chariots of victory and silenced the last remaining voices of the opposition who championed reason and freedom. In America these chariots saw the triumph of classic Marxism and neoMarxist race and gender politics, and saw the resurgence of Christianity, which replaced five justices on the United States Supreme Court with five bishops of the Catholic Church. This new bishop majority decreed in the landmark case Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization (2022) that individual states have a right to violate the First Amendment and to establish religion, and to declare, against the evidence of the senses, against the optical and audio scans of laboratory machines, and against the findings of empirical science, that a single cell zygote formed at the moment of conception, formed after the fusion of a sperm and an ovum, is equal to an actual, whole, forty trillion cell human person because a supernatural human soul substance has made its appearance at this moment. The court decreed that individual states have a right to declare that the destruction of this single cell, potential human life form is an act of murder and is criminally punishable by the law. The age of second religiousness the West has entered during the final stages of its development has left no nation untouched; it has spread the black gospels of gender, race and class politics and old time religion far and wide, from Asia to the Americas; and it celebrated its latest victory in Europe on May 28, 2023. On this day in Turkey, on the second round of presidential elections, the people reelected Recep Erdogan president. Recep Erdogan: leader of Islam in Turkey, founder of the Islamist Justice and Development Party in 2001, and the twelfth and current president of the nation, in office since 2014. Recep Erdogan: who took command of the Islamist movement in Turkey in 1997 while he was mayor of Istanbul, when he publicly recited in the city of Siirt a poem written by Ziya Gokalp, a panTurkish, Islamist activist of the early twentieth century. The poem is a call to arms of Allah's votaries to destroy liberal democracy: "The mosques are our barracks, the domes our helmets, the minarets our bayonets and the faithful our soldiers." Recep Erdogan: the face of the new Turkey, an agent of the East and an enemy of the West. Recep Erdogan: the preeminent voice of Islamic values and the gleaming edge of the Islamic sword. Recep Erdogan: an authoritarian leader commanding an army of the faithful across the nation. Recep Erdogan: the pilot of a national projectile which has blown up the offices of modern governance. Recep Erdogan: the wielder of unchecked, unconstitutional executive power. Recep Erdogan: a new caesar figure who has swept away free, fair, multiparty elections. Recep Erdogan: a bomb which has reduced his nation's infrastructure of liberal traditions and institutions to rubble and ash. Recep erdogan: a battering ram which has smashed the wall of separation between state and religion. Recep Erdogan: a general in command of a new Ottoman Caliphate. Recep Erdogan: a police chief whose officers have enforced Islam in every home, office, school and street in the land. Recep Erdogan: an imam masquerading as a statesman who has declared holy war on the Turkish Republic and Turkish democracy. Recep Erdogan: a religious leader who has targeted Turkish secularism for total destruction. Recep Erdogan: an avatar of the general direction of the world away from reason and toward worlds unperceived. Recep Erdogan: a snake oil salesman who peddles Islam in bottles marked justice and development. Recep Erdogan: a president who has disgraced his office with the policies and discourse of fear and superstition. Recep Erdogan: a new totalitarian who has expanded Islam into every aspect of public and private life in Turkey. Recep Erdogan: a red crescent dictator who has made state affairs religious affairs and religious affairs state affairs. Recep Erdogan: a mullah in charge of the government who has given Islam maximum weight, scope, influence and resources. Recep Erdogan: the most fearsome political actor on behalf of Islam in the history of modern Turkey. Recep Erdogan: the embodiment of the will of the people, the will of the mob, the will of the streets, the will of the gutters and the will of the sewers in their campaign to enforce Islamic values and roll back one hundred years of freedom and progress in Turkey: "Under the leadership of Recep Tayyip Erdogan, Turkey has increasingly turned its face from the West toward the East. It has associated itself more with Islamic values, made new friends and allies in the Arab world and built up its overseas military involvement, including in Somalia and Qatar, where Turkey's presence has been welcome. These developments have not made all Turks happy, however, as all this has been accompanied by rising authoritarianism. Sinem Adar, an expert on Turkey at the Center for Applied Turkey Studies (CATS) in Berlin, takes a negative view of the trajectory taken by the country under Erdogan. 'Turkey today is a prime example of increasing authoritarian practices', she observes. 'Since the late 2000s, the country has steadily moved away from the rule of law and effective separation of powers.' And Adar is especially frustrated by the turn things have taken after what seemed like auspicious conditions for progress. 'Given the country's almost seven decades of experience with competitive multiparty elections and its integration into the Western institutional architecture, the demise of Turkish democracy is arguably one of the most disappointing examples of a global trend,' she says. One of the founding values of the republic was secularism, or laicism, a concept based on the French model of strict separation between state and religion. The Ottoman Caliphate was abolished in 1924, less than a year after the establishment of the republic. Instead, the Diyanet, the socalled Directorate of Religious Affairs, was founded to give the state more control over the political influence of Islam. It is fair to argue now, however, that religion plays a far greater political role in Turkey today than twenty years ago thanks to Erdogan's policies and discourse. Adar underlines that there has always been a 'thin line between religion and politics in Turkey' since the establishment of the republic. But, she says, the past twenty years years of rule by Erdogan's Justice and Development Party (AKP) have brought about a significant difference in terms of 'the breadth and depth of the state sponsored penetration of religion into social life.' One can speak of a 'clear trend of gradual expansion of Islam into public life, especially in the last decade,' Adar says. The Diyanet has been turned into a gigantic political actor under the AKP's rule, as Adar explains. 'The Diyanet has gained more power than ever with mounting political weight and access to ever increasing resources. Especially after the failed coup attempt in 2016, it has assumed a key role in the daily reproduction of the narrative that Turkey's ruling elites under the leadership of Erdogan embody the people's will and defend the nation's authentic and national values, as well as the state's territorial integrity,' she says." (Turkey: A 100 Year Old Democracy With Ups And Downs by Burak Unveren). On October 28, 312 AD, at the Milvian Bridge in Rome, Emperor Constantine led his troops against his rival Emperor Maxentius. While Constantine was marching with his army, he looked up at the sun and saw a Christian cross made of light above it, with the words: In this sign, you will conquer. Leading an army of the faithful, Constantine went on to achieve victory over Maxentius and to establish Christianity as the official religion of the Roman Empire, and end the rule of reason and freedom which had defined one thousand years of Classical civilization. Standing on a balcony at his presidential palace on the night of his victory over the secular candidate Kemal Kilicdaroglu, Recep Erdogan chanted with his supporters the words, Bye, bye, Kemal! With these words, Erdogan had conquered Turkey. He said farewell to the rule of reason and freedom which Kemal Ataturk had founded as the Republic of Turkey in 1923. He said farewell to the secular nation under the Turkish banner which Kemal Ataturk had unfurled. In 2023, in the centenary year of the birth of the Turkish Republic, the nation lies in ruins, shattered by the global forces of religion which have spelled the doom of the West.

THE ELECTION FIX, COURTESY OF DOMINION VOTING SYSTEMS

In organized sports, fixing is the act of playing or officiating a match in order to achieve a predetermined result, in the process violating the rules of the game and violating the law. Match fixing is linked to corruption and organized crime and those who expose it disappear and are killed. The first recorded act of match fixing took place on December 2, 1896. Promoted as the Heavyweight Championship of the World, the boxing match between Bob Fitzsimmons and Tom Sharkey was fixed by the referee, the corrupt lawman of the Old West, Wyatt Earp. The lawman fabricated a foul by Fitzsimmons in order to throw the game to Sharkey. The fix is described by Brookes Lee, the doctor who treated Sharkey: "I fixed Sharkey up to look as if he had been fouled. How? Well, that is something I do not care to reveal, but I will assert that it was done—that is enough. There is no doubt that Fitzsimmons was entitled to the decision and did not foul Sharkey. I got $1,000 for my part in the affair." (Asserts He Fixed The Sharkey Foul, in The San Francisco Call, August 14, 1905). In the decades which have passed since the infamous Fitzsimmons-Sharkey match fix, corruption has spread far and wide across American society and poisoned all levels of government in the nation. It reached the dark pinnacle of its development in the 2020 presidential election when a company which produces and sells electronic voting hardware and software fixed the election in favor of Joe Biden, and in its voting machines and tabulators committed the greatest act of election fraud in the history of democracy, as it brought forth a tragedy of epic, world historical proportions: the decline of the world's arsenal of freedom into a tinpot, third rate, jungle infested banana republic. Founded in 2002 and headquartered in Toronto, Canada, in Denver, Colorado, in Belgrade, Serbia and in nations throughout the world, Dominion Voting Systems arranged, advanced, processed and produced the data which gave victory to Joe Biden, and set forth in numerical columns and tables the definitive end of freedom and law in America. The naive and the untutored could scarcely believe their eyes when they saw Joe Biden's victory fixed by Dominion, but students of history were unsurprised and unfazed. They knew that corruption has marked the decline and fall of all great civilizations throughout the ages. They knew that the decline and fall of Rome commenced with the corruption which overthrew the Roman Republic and the Roman Constitution and rendered the guardian of these, the Roman Senate, a dead letter. The saw corruption in Rome produce a regime of executive dictatorship, state overreach, confiscatory taxation, bureaucratic overregulation, overspending through currency debasement, redistribution of wealth, welfare doles, degenerate circuses, and the toleration and settlement of alien Germans and Christians. They saw corruption rear its head in America in the twenty first century, and as it did in ancient Rome, preside over the collapse of a free society. They saw evidence of Dominion's fix of the 2020 presidential election and saw the evidence encoil around the country and strangle constitutional government. Item. In the 2020 presidential election, Dominion darkened cyberspace with fraud. It ran ballots for Joe Biden through tabulating machines multiple times and tabulated votes for Biden like rabbits pulled out of hats. It programmed human appearing marionnettes to fabricate, record and adjudicate votes for Joe Biden. It manufactured vote totals: one hundred percent for Joe Biden and zero percent for Donald Trump. It scanned and rescanned ballots countless times until they are were cast for Joe Biden. It transformed the process of counting votes into a process of creating votes and made the beneficiary Joe Biden. It discarded votes for Donald Trump and counted only votes for Joe Biden. It placed tabulating machines, adjudication machines and poll books in the service of the Democrat Party. It filled binders with the tactics of stealing elections. It created votes for Joe Biden in the dead of night from a magic world of wires, circuits and interconnected digital technology. It directed light radiation blazing with illegality onto ballots for Donald Trump in order to digitally convert them into ballots for Joe Biden. It constructed digital files and data fields which made batches of ballots for Joe Biden materialize. It constructed an Iron Curtain between election observers and election workers so that the latter could be given the means to fix the election for Joe Biden. It staged a multiple collecting, a multiple ordering, a multiple processing, a multiple operating, a multiple declaring, a multiple arranging, a multiple computing and a multiple printing of votes for Joe Biden which reenacted old time religion and the dreams of Abrahamic seers and created something out of nothing: "At the Michigan Senate Oversight Committee hearing on Tuesday, a woman who worked as a contractor for Dominion Voting Systems came forward to testify. She said that what she witnessed was 'complete fraud.' Speaking at the Binsfield Office Building in Lansing, Melissa Carone was welcomed by state senator Ed Bloom. A resident of Wayne County, Mich., she has a background in IT and cyber security. Carone said that she was contracted by a temp staffing service to work with Dominion Voting Systems and worked from November 3 through the next day. She said that she was 'initially supposed to be working at the Department of Elections, that was an order from Dominion Voting Systems. What I witnessed at the TDS Center was complete fraud. The whole 27 hours I was there. There were batches of ballots being ran through the tabulating machines numerous times, being counted eight to ten times, I watched this with my own eyes. I was there to assist with IT. These people on night shift, there were four people on night shift, one of whom I've known for over twenty years. He approached me and said he has absolutely zero training whatsoever.' She said this was a 'contradiction' of what others had claimed, who had said that they had 'so much training.' Carone said that 'These people had no idea what they were doing.' As regards the adjudication process, Carone said that she was 'under the impression 100 percent that all of these workers were in on this. There was not a single ballot that the whole night, the whole 27 hours that I was there, that was for Donald Trump, not one, that is scary, there is no reason for that. There was something going on at that Department of Elections and it's clearly something that is very illegal, and I am grateful to God that I didn't go there.' Upon questioning, she clarified that her position was to be a temporary worker for Dominion. She said that there was a 'big data loss,' as well, on November 3. She was asked as to the basis for her allegation that ballots were counted multiple times, and she said: 'So the tabulating machines, when a ballot jams, it puts up an error, it will say discard or recount, so when it puts up that error, when a jam occurs, the correct way to go about it is to discard the whole batch, to take the ones that have already been tabulated, put them back into a pile, put the one that jammed on top, discard, discard the whole thing, then rescan them. They were not discarding, so they were just rescanning, rescanning, rescanning, counting ballots eight to ten ballots, just recounting them. They had absolutely no idea what they were doing.' To clarify, she said 'If you do not discard it, it is recounting it. Say ballot 25 had an issue, you had already went through 24 ballots, so you're going to put them back all in a pile and you're just going to rescan it, so you're counting that 24 again.' McBroom looked for clarity as to what happened to the ballots, saying that after ballots were counted they were meant to be put into locked boxes. Carone said that this was not happening, and that instead those steel boxes were being used 'for barriers for the poll watchers so they couldn't get close. They were allowed to do whatever they wanted to do, Nick and Samuel, that worked for Dominion, they were on the stage, they had a contract employee, me, and another one, who was from Texas.' Carone was trained by Dominion to work on the tabulating machines and as part of the adjudication process. That training was for one hour on November 2 at a hotel, and was done with a tabulating machine and an adjudication machine. She was given a binder as to how everything worked. She worked with two contract employees and three Dominion employees. 'I saw the van come in at 4:30 AM full of ballots,' she said. She was asked about the multiple counting of the ballots, if vote totals reflected the multiple counting of votes. Carone said 'why do you think the poll books were so off.' Senator Jeff Irwin (D-18th District), asked Carone 'if someone were to go and run the same ballot over and over and over again, that would end up showing up as a massive discrepancy—'. Carone interrupted and asked 'did you say someone took a ballot and ran it over and over and over again? Just one ballot? Or a batch of fifty?' 'Either way,' Irwin said. He said 'I'm just wondering why the numbers at the end of the day aren't matching up with the stories that we're hearing, I'm trying to square that circle.' 'Everything that happened at that TDS Center was fraud, every single thing,' Carone said. She said she didn't know where the 4:30 AM ballots came from." (Dominion Contractor Drops BOMBSHELL That What She Witnessed In Michigan Was 'Complete Fraud', in The Post Millennial, December 1, 2020). In the presidential election of 2020, America was attacked by a bomb detonated by Dominion Voting Systems. This bomb produced rubble and fallout marked election fraud, algorithm changes, software designed to fix elections, Venezualen ties and Cuban money, which buried the nation's liberal traditions and institutions for all time to come. In April 2023, an American multinational television channel received an order of surrender from its management. Joining hands with the nation's political and cultural establishment, the management of Fox News settled a lawsuit with Dominion for 787.5 million dollars and recanted Fox's exposure of the Dominion election fix. And yet it moves!, proclaimed Italian physicist Galileo Galilei in 1633 before the Roman Catholic Inquisition after it ordered him to recant his claims that the Earth moves around the Sun. Four centuries after Galileo's protestation in the name of reality, Fox News' recantation has been met by equal protests by civilized people in the name of reality. The fearsome reality beyond the settlement lives on: the dissolution of democracy in America.

NASA REVIVES SOVIET SPACE PROGRAM

Time: October 4, 1957. Place: the Baikonur Cosmodrome, Soviet Kazakhstan. The world's first artificial Earth satellite is launched. A polished metal sphere fifty eight centimeters in diameter, Sputnik I sends radio signals back to Earth for three weeks before it falls back into the atmosphere on January 4, 1958. What follows is a string of achievements by the Soviets, which catapulted it above America's program: the first lunar landing in 1959; the first spacewalk in 1965; the first space rover deployment in 1966; the first probes to Venus and Mars, and the first successful soft landings on these planets, in the 1960s and 1970s; the first space station in 1971; and the first modular space station on 1986. Established in 1955, the Soviet space program ended with the dissolution of the Soviet Union in 1991. But the launching of communism into space did not cease but would be continued by America. The new far left powers that be which had achieved control over the arsenal of the free world, and to mass ovations had dedicated themselves to its total destruction, would seek to penetrate into deep space and deep time with the fearsome tentacles of political correctness. The target of the red octopus was the James Webb Space Telescope, launched on Christmas Day 2021. James Webb was the second administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration from 1961 to 1968. His achievements are legendary. He directed NASA's implementation of the goal set by President John Kennedy to land an American on the moon before the end of the decade. He sustained the political support and the financial resources necessary for the success of the Apollo moon landing mission. He created the Manned Spacecraft Center, a center for human spaceflight, training, research and flight control, in Houston, Texas. He launched the Mariner and Pioneer programs of planetary exploration. He developed robotic spacecraft which explored the surface of the moon ahead of the manned moon landing. He launched the Large Space Telescope program. When he retired from NASA moments before the moon landing in July 1969, the agency had launched seventy five space science missions, which studied stars, galaxies, the sun, and the space environment above Earth's atmosphere. His Orbiting Solar Observatory and Explorer satellites laid the foundation for all later astronomical discoveries. Announcing the name of the successor to the Hubble Space Telescope, NASA Administrator Sean O'Keefe opened the pages of today's astronomy textbooks and showed the chapters on American space exploration, written one and all by James Webb: "It is fitting that Hubble's successor be named in honor of James Webb. Thanks to his efforts, we got our first glimpses at the dramatic landscape of outer space. He took our nation on its first voyages of exploration, turning our imagination into reality. Indeed, he laid the foundations at NASA for one of the most successful periods of astronomical discovery. As a result, we're rewriting the textbooks today with the help of the Hubble Space Telescope, the Chandra X ray Observatory and the James Webb Telescope." Thirty years after the dissolution of the Soviet space program, communism was relaunched into space with an attack on the James Webb Space Telescope by activists masquerading as scientists who demanded the renaming of the telescope. Donning the solemn, serious sedentary robes of physicists and astronomers, their blazing, white hot inferno of communist enforcement was unmasked in their attack on the world renowned NASA administrator. Listen to Chanda Prescod-Weinstein, professor of physics at the University of New Hampshire, Sarah Tuttle, professor of astronomy at the University of Washington, Lucianne Walkowicz, astronomer at the Adler Planetarium in Chicago, and Brian Nord, physicist at the Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory and the University of Chicago, and hear blasting into space the voices of a new inquisition. Ignited and fueled by America's political and cultural establishment, this roaring inquisition demands the establishment of language, policies and measures which seek to avoid offense to Marxist and neoMarxist gender, race and class formations and parrot and reinforce the people's progressive party line. Listen to this inquisition demand that the James Webb Space Telescope be renamed on the grounds that James Webb was homophobic. James Webb was a gay baiter. James Webb effected the mass dismissal of gays. James Webb created a legacy of discrimination against gays. James Webb established federal policies of hatred and prejudice against gays. James Webb was a creater and facilitator of antigay materials and measures. James Webb led merciless witch hunts against gays. James Webb planned and participated in antigay campaigns. James Webb denied the humanity of gays. James Webb purged gays from all levels of the federal government. James Webb was the torch leader of the Lavender Scare. James Webb established a federal workforce hostile to gays. James Webb was a senior persecutor of gays who hurled them into bonfires blazing with bigotry and intolerance: "Because of its ability to see more deeply into spacetime than any instrument before it, the Hubble Space Telescope has completely transformed the way we see the universe—and ourselves. The James Webb Space Telescope (JWST), often called 'the next Hubble,' promises to do even better. Slated to launch later this year, JWST will peer farther into the universe than any optical or infrared telescope before it and could show us galaxies in their infancy, probe potentially habitable worlds and explore the mysteries of dark energy. These kinds of data not only provide insight into the universe but also help us humans situate our earthly concerns in context. It is unfortunate, therefore, that NASA's current plan is to launch this incredible instrument into space carrying the name of a man whose legacy at best is complicated and at worst reflects complicity in homophobic discrimination in the federal government. James Webb, who died in 1992, was a career civil servant whose time at the US. Department of State under President Harry Truman included advancing the development of psychological warfare as a cold war tool. He later oversaw the Apollo program as NASA administrator. When he arrived at NASA in 1961, his leadership role meant he was in part responsible for implementing what was by then federal policy: the purging of LGBT individuals from the workforce. When he was at State, this policy was enforced by those who worked under him. As early as 1950, he was aware of this policy, which was a forerunner to the antigay witch hunt known today as the lavender scare. Historian David K. Johnson's 2004 book on the subject, The Lavender Scare, discusses archival evidence indicating that Webb, along with others in State Department leadership, was involved in Senate discussions that ultimately kicked off a devastating series of federal policies. Many astronomers feel a debt of gratitude for Webb's work as NASA administrator and are appreciative of and nostalgic for the time during the Apollo program when the space agency thrived. But while appreciation and nostalgia are important, they are not sufficient. Webb might have played a positive role at NASA, but his greater legacy beyond the agency is also relevant. Now that we know of Webb's silence at State and his actions at NASA, we think it is time to rename JWST. The name of such an important mission, which promises to live in the popular and scientific psyche for decades, should be a reflection of our highest values. The allegations of Webb's complicity in persecution received broader public attention about six years ago. Although some astronomers reacted with dismay at the time, many in the community believed the opportunity to rename the telescope had passed. More recently, an astronomer attempted to refute Webb's negative image in an unreviewed blog post, including by highlighting the fact that a homophobic quote was misattributed to Webb on his Wikipedia page. Astronomers on social media began to argue that in the absence of this specific quote, there was little to prove that Webb was responsible for homophobic policies. But that correction changes nothing. Webb was in leadership as the lavender scare unfolded. Additional archival evidence, easily found by Columbia University astronomer Adrian Lucy, underlines Webb's role as a facilitator of homophobic policy discussions with members of the Senate. In particular, in 1950 assistant secretary of state Carlisle Humelsine submitted a set of memos to Webb that included 'objectives and methods of operation of the Senate Committee established to look into the problem,' which Webb then shared during a meeting with Senator Clyde Hoey of North Carolina. The records clearly show that Webb planned and participated in meetings during which he handed over homophobic material. There is no record of him choosing to stand up for the humanity of those being persecuted. As someone in management, Webb bore responsibility for policies enacted under his leadership, including homophobic ones that were in place when he became NASA administrator." (The James Webb Space Telescope Needs To Be Renamed by Chanda Prescod-Weinstein, Sarah Tuttle, Lucianne Walkowicz and Brian Nord, Scientific American, March 1, 2021). A countdown is a sequence of backward counting which ends with the ignition of a rocket. It was first popularized in the launch scene in Fritz Lang's classic 1929 science fiction film Woman On The Moon. In the twenty first century, a countdown commenced to launch a special rocketship into space. It was built in America by Americans but carried a Soviet payload. The equipment on board was second generation communism stamped LGBT. On Christmas Day 2021, at 7:20 AM Eastern Standard Time, NASA's countdown clock reached T minus zero and the Soviets were back into space.

DISNEY TOWN KIDNAPS CHILDREN

The town of Celebration, Florida, presents a Shangri La to the world. It projects a dazzling light of peace and happiness. This master planned paradise, a suburb of Orlando, was founded by the Walt Disney Company in 1995. Its very name is supposed to tell a story. This is a story of costumed Halloween parades, summertime music concerts, neighborhood potluck meals, cake and ice cream family gatherings, and idyllic homes with spacious verandas situated silently along leafy, tree lined streets. Its government is Walt Disney. Its schools and services are Walt Disney. Its streets and parks are Walt Disney. Its homes and businesses are Walt Disney. Its ten thousand residents tell their friends and relatives that they inhabit a magic kingdom created and sustained by the world's premier producer of wholesome entertainment. But beneath its placid waters lies a roiling horror of unspeakable dimensions. Beyond the veil of a heaven in which saints and angels are enthroned blazes an underworld in which demons burn the innocent alive and subject them to endless drumbeats of mental and physical torture. Decent people behold the dark reality of the town of Celebration and see beyond the appearance of a picturesque highland of celestial virtue a deep, dank, foul smelling basement of moral and physical degradation, whose crimes against humanity are a portrait of the decline of civilization in the twenty first century into the Grim Reaper's arms of the far left establishment. Below the seraphic skies of Celebration lies a swampland of radical politics which has destroyed the minds and bodies of children forever. Look at the nightmare known as Celebration and see a religion called transgenderism enforced on children. Rejecting one hundred years of scientific research, commencing with the pioneering studies of Nettie Stevens and Edmund Wilson, who discovered the chromosomal basis of gender, this religion proclaims that what Stevens and Wilson discovered, sex genes, do not in fact exist, and gender can be changed by human action and belief. Look at Celebration and see a town whose residents voted for Joe Biden and support the transgender ideology at the top of his agenda. See young people prepared and primed for transgender mutilation. See a town placed under the control of a company which has declared war on minors. See a town which does not protect its children but keeps them captive in dungeons of ideological indoctrination. See elementary schools teach gender ideology in place of reading, writing, arithmetic and science. See a town which has repealed the right of parents to raise their children to be upright, upstanding and well adjusted in mind and character. See a town locked in the vice grip of a corporate culture of gender politics. See a town force children to become gays and lesbians and to identify as members of the opposite sex. See a town a dedicated to the programming of children in the party line of political correctness. See a town under the government of a corporation without moral or legal accountability of any kind. See a town governed by executives and shareholders whose mission is to incinerate young minds within a white hot climate of gender dysphoria. See a town cast the grim shadow of the surgeon's scalpel and the chemist's castration over its young population. See a town whose theme parks and business districts prohibit public opposition to gender ideology in the name of protecting free speech. See a town enjoy special privileges, special status and a special playing field, and enjoy the right to take children away from healthy home environments and place them lightless, airless cells in which they are subjected to megawatt currents of gender, race and class propaganda. See a town strap children onto transgender operating tables under the cover of the First Amendment. See a town condemn those who oppose transgenderism and preferential treatment for homosexuals as transphobic and homophobic bigots. See a town which will fight to the death against the state's Parental Rights in Education law, which protects children from indoctrination in neoMarxist gender and sex theories. See a town which screens in every home, school and office the series The Proud Family: Louder and Prouder, which demands the mass expropriation of whites in the name of reparations for slavery, proclaims that capitalism is a system of white supremacy, and proclaims that capitalist America must atone for its racism by instituting a regime of black totalitarian tyranny. See a town which screens in every home, school and office the animated series Baymax, which features a woman who claims to be a man promote the notion of male menstruation and gives advice on which tampons to purchase. See a town which screens in every home, school and office the series Ironheart, which features a drag queen and "transmasculine" man as superheroes. See a town under the dictatorship of a multinational corporation which proclaims the joys of being a drag queen, a transvestite, and a mentally disordered individual who claims he or she was born into the wrong body. See a town which has targeted the ideals which founded America, the ideals of the Enlightenment, for total destruction: "Florida Governor Ron DeSantis defended his administration’s fight with the multinational corporation Disney on the day of his campaign launch for the 2024 Republican presidential nomination. When asked if perhaps his administration has taken the fight too far and too long against Disney, DeSantis said he stands by his decision to rescind the company’s special self governing status and that Disney escalated the fight when they filed suit against his administration. The governor said: 'Florida stands for the protection of children. We believe jamming gender ideology in elementary school is wrong. Disney obviously supported injecting gender ideology in elementary school. They did oppose our parents’ rights legislation, and the fact is when they opposed it, that was a big deal, because for fifty years, any time Disney wanted something in Florida politics, they pretty much got it, but not this time.' DeSantis then said that Disney’s corporate culture continued to project a desire to push adult sexuality on children, which pushed his administration to reconsider the special benefits the company received from the state of Florida. 'I signed the bill. We did, as you say, win on the issue. But what happened was Disney’s posturing, some of the other statements that their executives were making, kind of the corporate culture, had really been outed as trying to inject matters of sex into the programming for the youth,' he said. 'Disney engineered many decades ago where they actually had their own government that they controlled with no accountability. They were exempt from the laws that all their competitors had to follow, massive tax breaks, and they even racked up municipal debt,' he said. 'Florida basically put them on a pedestal many decades ago and joined the state with this one company at the hip. We just didn’t feel that we were comfortable maintaining that relationship. And so we ended their self governing status. So Disney has to live under the same laws as everybody. They have to pay the same taxes as everybody and obviously, they’ll be responsible for those debts.'

DeSantis blamed Disney for keeping the fight going by filing a lawsuit, which he called a gesture to protect its shareholders. 'I think the company's ethos have changed in a way that's alienated lot of people in our legislature and in Florida, and so there was really no justification to keep it. But make no mistake, they're suing to try to get special privileges. People are making money in Florida hand over fist because we have a great business climate. That's not good enough for them. They want to be treated differently than Universal and Seaworld, and we don't think that that's appropriate. I think that they should withdraw the lawsuit, but obviously, we're going to defend our actions, because we think we have the right to do what we did.' DeSantis also accused the media of hypocrisy for criticizing his move, given that they have cast an uncomfortable shadow over Disney's special relationship with Florida for years. 'The media was always very hostile to that. But just because I happen to be involved in bringing it back to reality and making sure that they were under the same laws. Well, then all of a sudden they're running to Disney's defense. I mean, are you kidding me?' he said. DeSantis closed by acknowledging the amount of money that Disney earned under his governorship, such as when he kept the Florida theme parks open during the coronavirus pandemic while Governor Gavin Newsom (D) in California kept them closed. 'I'd also just finally point out, nobody probably has made Disney more money than me, because they were open during COVID and they were closed in California. And that went on for many, many months, where, literally, I had all the theme parks in Florida opened in 2020. People are going, it's safe, they're having fun and the California Parks were closed. I think they were closed for over a year out in California.' " (Ron DeSantis Defends His Fight Against Disney In Campaign Launch: 'Right To Do What We Did' by Paul Bois). In Osceola County in Florida, occupying twenty square kilometers of land, sits a state within a state. It is a state ruled by the Walt Disney Company and governed by a fearsome constitution. Seceding from America, its residents have enacted as the supreme law of their land the right of their corporate masters to enforce a new religion. Advocating communist class war, demanding preferential treatment for gays and lesbians, rejecting the existence of sex genes, and committing murder and mayhem against the minds and bodies of youth, the religion whose call letters are LGBTQ has broadcast its message across the length and breadth of Celebration and thundered out the decline of the West.

NEW CHURCH, SAME RELIGION

In attempt to reduce skyrocketing costs, the wine industry has begun reusing wine bottles. Centuries ago, it was common practice for wine drinkers to bring their used bottles to producers for refills. In the wine growing regions of Europe, from Portugal to Italy to France to Germany, it was a common practice to have new wine poured into old bottles, and the practice has once again, in the twenty first century, become widespread and commercialized. In 2012, in Salem, Massachusetts, a cask of old wine was poured into a new bottle and peddled across the world. It was a decades old wine marketed in shiny new bottles with new labels and was imbibed with enthusiasm by those intoxicated by its messages of radicalism and revolution. It was a wine first mass produced at the dawn of the twentieth century and its latest packaging, a century later, has been greeted with standing ovations by tens of thousands of imbibers in every nation on earth. This wine, this intoxicant, this narcotic, this poison: gender politics, race politics and class politics. It is the religion which proclaims that reality is not fixed, physical or determinate, but is malleable and determined by the needs and interests of gender, race and class tribes. This wine has been bottled and served since its original merchant and producer rolled it off the vineyards of the reading rooms of the British Museum in the nineteenth century. At the dawn of the twentieth century, the head vintner's concoction, rejecting the fundamental values of the Enlightenment, achieved mass circulation and became the ruling religion of the West. In the twentieth century, the wine first grown by Karl Marx on the dark mountains of hatred and resentment became synonomous with the political and cultural establishment, and in the present day it is presiding over the collapse of civilization. A century after Marxism achieved iconic status and entered the hearts and minds of the masses, two faithful students of the master organized a group dedicated to the spread of the neoMarxist gospel of gender, race and class. This gospel, first marketed under its own label, was poured into new bottles with new labels in the winery of Lucien Greaves and Malcolm Jarry. On the property, in the warehouses, with the equipment and with the facilities of these young activists on behalf of gender communism, race communism and class communism, the new label was sent out to attract more recruits to the cause. The new recruits totaled over one million people in countries throughout the world, from America to Canada to Australia to Finland to Germany to Britain. The new label: the Satanic Temple. The contents: the same old fermented, alcoholic drink to be consumed in the evening and night of a mind which has abandoned its normal processes. Look at the Satanic Temple and see the same advocacy of mysticism in the name of reason, of faith in the name of science, of fashionable beliefs in the name of enlightenment, and of adherence to the party line in the name of uncensored and independent investigation, which informed the old label communist movements. See black signs blazing out the fluorescences of tribal faiths. See black chapels perform baptisms in the holy waters of gender, race and class ideologies. See ministers and congregations gather at conventions around the world, reject logic and sanity, and proclaim that what was discovered by pioneering geneticists over a century ago, sex chromosomes, do not in fact exist, and that gender is something which can be changed by human intervention. See votaries reject logic and sanity and proclaim that physical individuals in space and time do not exist but only floating abstractions, such as race politics, sexual orientation groups and people of color, exist, and these nonphysical beings are mystically felt and intuited in the hearts of progressive people. See votaries reject Christian rites in favor of communist rites. See votaries in hooded cloaks wield the Grim Reaper's scythe and cut down the voices questioning the far left straightjackets placed over discussions and debates. See votaries bind themselves with the ropes of political correctness and call their mental immobility the highest expression of progressive thought. See votaries question all forms of authority except the authority claimed by the far left establishment. See votaries descend into the depths of hell and worship a feminist Lucifer, a black power Lucifer and a proletarian Lucifer. See votaries perform rituals, ceremonies and guerrilla theater dramatizing Marxist propaganda and the art of violence and destruction. See votaries behold the world through upside down glasses and call reason, truth and knowledge forms of ignorance and call the faiths embraced by radical women, radical nonwhites and the radical poor the highest forms of enlightenment. See votaries reject freedom of thought and belief and promote the red rainbow colors of communist lockstep. See votaries worship at the altars of community service and sacrifice for the sake of society. See votaries promote blind belief in place of critical thinking. See Marxist protests, Marxist commands, Marxist slogans, Marxist flags, Marxist educators, Marxist academics, Marxist craft workers, Marxist statues, Marxist evangelists, Marxist directors, Marxist clubs, Marxist conventions, Marxist projects, Marxist campaigns, Marxist schools, Marxist children, Marxist bibles, Marxist gods, Marxist blasphemers, Marxist denominations and the dispensers of Marxist drugs in vials marked gender, race and class assemble by the millions in vast dark rooms in capital cities across the world, outrage civilized people, and hail the Prince of Darkness in his war against liberal democracy: "This may be the world's largest ever gathering of Satanists--and it's about to begin at a Marriott hotel in downtown Boston. In a candle lit room set aside for Satanic ceremonies, a neon sign welcomes you to The Little Black Chapel. A raised altar stands at one end, a white pentagram on the floor in front of it. The ritual being performed here is an 'unbaptism', in which participants symbolically reject religious rites performed when they were children. 'No names,' says a Satanist who agreed to let me witness their ceremony, as long as they aren't identified. They wear a floor length, hooded cloak and a black face mask. Their hands are bound with rope, which is then cast off to represent liberation. Pages are torn out of a Bible to symbolize overturning their Christian baptism. It's clear the experience was powerful for them. 'As a a gay child, being told you are an abomination and should be destroyed, warped a lot of my thinking. Finding The Satanic Temple has really helped me embrace logic and empathy.' The Satanic Temple is recognized as a religion by the US government, and has ministers and congregations in America, Europe and Australia. More than 830 people snapped up tickets for its late April convention, dubbed SatanCon. Members say they don't actually believe in a literal Lucifer or Hell. Instead, they say Satan is a metaphor for questioning authority, and grounding your beliefs in science. The sense of community around these shared values makes it a religion, they say. They do use the symbols of Satan for rituals--for example when celebrating a wedding or adopting a new name. That might include having an upside down neon cross on your altar while shouting: Hail Satan! For many Christians, this is serious blasphemy. 'That's not wrong,' agrees Dex Desjardins, a spokesperson for The Satanic Temple. 'A lot of our imagery is inherently blasphemous. We've got folks who wear inverted crosses. And our opening ceremony did have the ripping up of a Bible as a symbol of oppression, especially oppression of LGBTQ folk and women, and also the BIPOC community, and pretty much anybody who's grown up with religious trauma, which is a tremendous number of our members.' The Satanists say they respect everyone's right to choose their faith, and they're not trying to upset people. But Christian protesters from many denominations have gathered outside the hotel, carrying signs warning of damnation. 'Repent and believe the Gospel,' urges one. 'Satan rules over all the children of pride,' says another--the letters of pride shaded in the rainbow colors of the LGBTQ Pride flag. 'We are hoping to show God that we do not accept this blasphemy, and that we Catholics have not abandoned the public square to Satanists,' says protester Michael Shivler, from a conservative Catholic group. Convention goers in the lobby eye the protest outside. 'They called us dope smoking masturbators', one man reports. 'Oooh, sky daddy is mad with me!' someone else jokes. Political activism is a core part of The Satanic Temple's identity. It believes religion and the state should be kept separate, and frequently files lawsuits in the US to defend the distinction. Their point is serious, but they relish bringing satire and outrageousness to the fight. In Oklahoma, for example, they asked to erect a 2.4m Satanic statue at the state capitol when a monument of the Ten Commandments was put up, noting that the First Amendment requires all religions to be treated equally. (The Commandments were ultimately removed after a court battle). In a hall packed with supporters, the directors of TST's campaigns present updates on their work. Successes are greeted with whoops, applause, and the sign of the horns. [A] project drawing headlines is After School Satan Clubs slogan: Educatin' with Satan. The Temple would rather keep religion out of schools, but wants to counter faith groups coming in to evangelize to pupils. So where local people have asked it to, it tries to launch an After School Satan Club, focused on community service, science, crafts and critical thinking." (The Satanic Temple: Think You Know About Satanists? Maybe You Don't by Rebecca Seales). A front organization is an entity set up by another entity and its members are followers and fellow travelers of the parent's party line. The idea of a front organization originated with Vladimir Lenin in his manifesto What Is To Be Done?: "I propose to reach the masses through a large number of other organizations intended for wide membership and, which, therefore, can be as loose and as public as possible" Communist front organizations spread out across the world in the 1920s after the Communist Revolution in Russia. One of the most notorious communist front organization was the World Federation of Scientific Workers, set up during the Cold War by scientists who supported the Soviet Union. The organization condemned Western nuclear testing but not Soviet nuclear testing, condemned the American quarantine of Cuba but the presence of Soviet missiles on the island, and condemned the American presence in Vietnam but not the Soviet presence. Advocating the gender, race and class colors of communism in the name of reason, science and free thought, the Satanic Temple is the latest and largest front organization to threaten liberal democratic order.

THREE HIGH COURT DECISIONS: THREE POINTS ENGULF AMERICA

Encirclement is a military tactic in which the target is isolated and surrounded by enemy forces. It is the mark of doom. The target is attacked on all sides; it cannot receive supplies or reinforcements; and it cannot retreat and must either fight to the death or surrender. During the Winter War between Finland and the Soviet Union in 1939, the Finns used the tactic, which they called motti, and surrounded, segmented, immobilized and destroyed the communist invader, and achieved world historical victory over an enemy ten times larger. In the twenty first century, in a land once venerated throughout the world as the lighthouse and arsenal of freedom, guiding people far and wide to hope and betterment during the long nights of oppression, the forces of encirclement have descended and reduced this proud land to servitude and blackened the soul of its people with hopelessness and despair. In the twenty first century, the United States of America was stabbed in the back by a new majority dedicated to the destruction of constitutional government and the establishment of totalitarian rule. In the twenty first century, the premier political creation of the Age of Enlightenment was surrounded, isolated and destroyed by three movements animated by a perfervid hatred of individual rights as they were pure expressions of the essence of the mass soul. In the twenty first century, three alien religions were voted into power by a new American Main Street which rejected the nation's liberal traditions and institutions and made statist philosophies the tenets of a new political and cultural establishment. The new establishment of tyranny was an age old netherworld which appeared from the depths whenever free civilizations descended into their death throes. The freedom of the Romans was blown apart by the volcanic explosions of mob rule, emperor worship, state worship, social welfare, Germanic barbarism and Christianity from the East, which paraded their robes of populist acceptance in the public squares and in the vast, echoing colosseums of the people. In the twenty first century, a new American majority has spoken through the highest court in the land and delivered three decisions which codified the end of freedom in the nation as they drove three stakes into the heart of the Constitution. Three decisions, three official promulgations of the establishment, three clamoring demands of the mob, three fearsome points of encirclement which have spelled the destruction of America. Point One: Grutter v. Bollinger (2003). Race communism reared its head in this landmark decision of the United States Supreme Court to uphold affirmative action in student admissions. The Court upheld racism as a compelling state interest. It upheld racism in the name of achieving a diverse student body. It upheld racism as necessary to advance a school's educational mission. It upheld racism in the name of deferring to a school's academic decisions. It upheld racism in order to create a necessary minimum of nonwhite students. It rejected the principle of merit, ignored academically gifted and qualified students, defended racism, racial balancing, racial percentages and racial quotas, and threw equal protection under the law to the winds: "Today, we hold that the Law School has a compelling interest in attaining a diverse student body. The Law School's educational judgment that such diversity is essential to its educational mission is one to which we defer. The Law School's assessment that diversity will, in fact, yield educational benefits is substantiated by respondents and their amici. Our scrutiny of the interest asserted by the Law School is no less strict for taking into account complex educational judgments in an area that lies primarily within the expertise of the university. Our holding today is in keeping with our tradition of giving a degree of deference to a university's academic decisions, within constitutionally prescribed limits. Our conclusion that the Law School has a compelling interest in a diverse student body is informed by our view that attaining a diverse student body is at the heart of the Law School's proper institutional mission, and that 'good faith' on the part of a university is 'presumed' absent 'a showing to the contrary.' As part of its goal of 'assembling a class that is both exceptionally academically qualified and broadly diverse,' the Law School seeks to 'enroll a critical mass of minority students.' The Law School's interest is not simply 'to assure within its student body some specified percentage of a particular group merely because of its race or ethnic origin.' That would amount to outright racial balancing, which is patently unconstitutional. Rather, the Law School's concept of critical mass is defined by reference to the educational benefits that diversity is designed to produce." (Grutter v Bollinger, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor for the Court, decided June 23, 2003). Point Two: National Federation of Independent Business v. Sebelius (2012). Classic communism reared its head in this landmark decision of the United States Supreme Court to uphold a requirement for Americans under the Affordable Care Act to purchase health insurance. The Court ruled that A is not A, a square is not a square and a circle is not a circle, but a square is a circle and a circle is a square, and that the penalty imposed for not purchasing health insurance, under the Affordable Care Act, is not in fact a penalty but can be construed as a tax, and is thus permissible under the Taxing and Spending Clause of the Constitution. The Court upheld an unnatural, unstraightforward, incoherent and incredible interpretation of the Affordable Care Act mandate to purchase health care, an interpretation which threw logic, language and common sense to the winds, in the name of saving, protecting, preserving and deferring to popular social program and to the will of the mob: "The most straightforward reading of the mandate is that it commands individuals to purchase insurance. After all, it states that individuals 'shall' maintain health insurance. Congress thought it could enact such a command under the Commerce Clause, and the Government primarily defended the law on that basis. But, for the reasons explained above, the Commerce Clause does not give Congress that power. Under our precedent, it is therefore necessary to ask whether the Government's alternative reading of the statute—that it only imposes a tax on those without insurance—is a reasonable one. Under the mandate, if an individual does not maintain health insurance, the only consequence is that he must make an additional payment to the IRS when he pays his taxes. That, according to the Government, means the mandate can be regarded as establishing a condition—not owning health insurance—that triggers a tax—the required payment to the IRS. Under that theory, the mandate is not a legal command to buy insurance. Rather, it makes going without insurance just another thing the Government taxes, like buying gasoline or earning income. And if the mandate is in effect just a tax hike on certain taxpayers who do not have health insurance, it may be within Congress's constitutional power to tax. The question is not whether that is the most natural interpretation of the mandate, but only whether it is a 'fairly possible' one. As we have explained, 'every reasonable construction must be resorted to, in order to save a statute from unconstitutionality.' The Government asks us to interpret the mandate as imposing a tax, if it would otherwise violate the Constitution. Granting the Act the full measure of deference owed to federal statutes, it can be so read." (National Federation of Independent Business v. Sebelius, Chief Justice John Roberts for the Court, decided June 28, 2012). Point Three. *Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization (2022). Christian totalitarianism reared its head in this landmark Supreme Court decision to overrule Roe v. Wade (1973) and Planned Parenthood v. Casey (1992) and authorize states to prohibit abortions. The Court ruled that the states have a right to violate the First Amendment's prohibition on the establishment of religion and to declare that the evidence of the eyes does not exist, the evidence revealed by pictures and photographs does not exist, the evidence that at the moment of conception, at the moment when a sperm fuses with an ovum, what appears is a primordium, a single cell organism called a zygote, and nothing more, does not in fact exist. The Court ruled that the states have a right to declare that individuals are blind because they have eyes and are deluded because they possess knowledge, and have the right to declare that the single diploid cell organism which appears at the moment of fertilization is in fact an actual, whole, human person the destruction of which constitutes murder. The Court ruled that the states have a right to declare that at the moment of conception there appears a mystical spark, essence and soul substance which constitutes an actual, whole, human person worthy of state protection. On June 24, 2022, the Court banged the gavel and dismissed the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment and dismissed shining the counsels of human sanity:

"Question: Whether all previability prohibitions on elective abortions are unconstitutional. Holding: The Constitution does not confer a right to abortion; Roe and Casey are overruled; and the authority to regulate abortion is returned to the people and their elected representatives." (Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization, Associate Justice Samuel Alito for the Court). Ventriloquism is an act of stagecraft in which the performer creates the illusion that his voice is coming from a prop known as a dummy. The act was born in Europe in the eighteenth century in traveling carnivals, where audiences sat astounded at the voices thrown by the entertainers. In America in the twenty first century, a new majority has thrown its voice to its props sitting on the nation's highest court. The justices have channeled the masses' aspirations for new regime of a tyranny attacking America from three sides: from classic communism, from its racialist variants and from old time Christianity. They have given constitutional sanction to the masses' satanic three pronged pitchfork plunged into the heart of a free society.

ANGELA MERKEL DIGS GERMANY'S GRAVE

Time: January 30, 1933. Place: Germany. A screaming crowd gives a wild ovation to Adolf Hitler at the window of the Reich Chancellery in Berlin on the evening of his inauguration as chancellor. The crowd roars out the birth of a "new Germany" as a socialist people's republic which will combat and expunge the poison of liberal democracy. The new Germany, the crowd proclaims, is radical, anticapitalist and far left, whose particular brand of far leftism is national socialism. The new Germany, the crowd proclaims, is a social state, a social partnership and a social market, which will smash through the decadent institutions of the free world and construct upon their ruins a vibrant, robust, organic order of totalitarian tyranny. Civilized observers assaulted by this bestial display of neocommunist sloganeering and seig heiling saw a different world and were not shocked at what they saw, because they knew Germany, but were nonetheless terrified. They knew this was not the new Germany but the old Germany, the unfree, obedient, submissive, heel clicking, state worshiping, "people's community" old Germany, and they knew that a new Germany, a Germany based upon liberal Enlightenment ideals planted deeply and unmoveably into the national psyche, was yet to be born and would never be born. Existent since the advent of ancient Barbaricum beyond the frontiers of the Roman Empire, the old Germany has undergone mutations and permutations throughout its two thousand year history, while its inner form and essence have remained unchanged. It has been named the Holy Roman Empire, the Iron Chancellor's German Reich, the Weimar Republic, the Third Reich and the Federal Republic of Germany, but the parade of names, dates and characters has served only to disguise the underlying reality of a state order predicated upon sacrifice for the sake of the totality, expressed in Kaiser Frederick II's infamous words: "I am the first servant of the state." The train of statist German chancellors, commencing with Otto von Bismarck, crashed, burned and sped into the end of its line in the twenty first century with the election of Angela Merkel in 2005, and it was altogether fitting and proper, and in accord with the values of the German establishment, that on April 17, 2023, German President Frank Walter Steinmeier awarded the nation's highest honor of merit to Merkel. After leaving office, every German chancellor is awarded a Federal Cross of Merit. There are eight levels of merit and it is the task of the German president to determine which of the eight levels the chancellor will receive. It was altogether fitting and proper, and in accord with the values of the German establishment, that the chancellor who had done more than other chancellor to the run the nation into the ground and make it flounder and capsize in the rocky shoals of radical politics would be awarded the highest order of merit. It was altogether fitting and proper, and in accord with the values of the German establishment, that the chancellor who had done more than any other chancellor to consolidate Germany's opposition to the liberal values of the Enlightenment would be awarded the Grand Cross for her sixteen years in office in the service of the ruling red shirt, brownshirt, communist, fascist, antiEnlightenment attitude of the nation which constitutes the fearsome, fixed soul of its people. Item. Angela Merkel promoted a fundamentalist, antindustrial, antitechnological green agenda. She declared war on nuclear power. She ended Germany's energy security. She supported Vladimir Putin, made Germany dependent on Russian natural gas, and made the Nord Stream 2 pipeline flow with the fossil fuels of Russian blackmail. This blackmail bankrupted the German economy and placed a pall of energy rationing over the lives and businesses of the people: "Merkel's decision to phase out nuclear power 'was a mistake in the form at the time, without saying how we want to supply ourselves with energy reasonably self sufficiently.' [Christian Democratic Union Vice President Carsten Linnemann]. Angela Merkel's legacy has severely waned following her exit from office a year and a half ago, principally on her failures to heed warnings—from former President Donald Trump, among others—on the threat posed by relying on Vladimir Putin's Russia for energy, which following the invasion of Ukraine sparked economic and energy crises in the European Union's main manufacturing hub. In October of last year, it was revealed in a declassified document that was drafted four months before the February invasion of Ukraine that Merkel's government foolishly believed that increasing dependency on Russian gas with the now sidelined Nord Stream 2 gas pipeline would 'not jeopardize.' Germany's energy security. The decision to ignore warnings from former President Donald Trump, who told Merkel in 2018 that Nord Stream 2 would leave Germany 'captive' to the political whims of Russia's Vladimir Putin, turned out to be disastrous for Germany in the months after her resignation, with tens of tens of billions of euros being wiped from the German economy and people and businesses forced to ration their energy usage. Fellow globalist and onetime ally, former President of the European Council Donald Tusk declared last year that Merkel's reliance on Russian gas—which she argued was necessary to keep her green agenda afloat—would go down as one of the 'biggest mistakes' of her time in office." (Legacy? What Legacy? Angel Merkel, Queen Of Migrant And Energy Crises Gets Germany's Highest Award by Kurt Zindulka). Item. Angela Merkel consolidated Germany's comprehensive, cradle to grave, welfare state as she defunded the nation's military to pay for it. Radical environmentalism, radical welfarism, energy dependence on Russia, a depleted national defense force, and an unwillingness and inability to support NATO, Ukraine and assume leadership in the West in the early months of the war: such were the legacies of Angela Merkel lauded by the establishment, as the light of the nation's civilization went out: "Her focus on investing in the green agenda as well as propping up social welfare programs also saw Germany's military consistently neglected during Merkel's reign, with the wealthy nation consistently failing to meet the two percent of GDP defense spending requirement for the NATO alliance. The derelict state of the Bundeswehr left the country scrambling when called upon to supply weapons and ammunition to Ukraine once it decided to do so, with Germany's reliance on Russia to keep the lights on widely discussed as a cause for the nation's reluctance to give material support to Ukraine in the early months of the war. Berlin has taken a backseat to Paris and London during the conflict since. Nevertheless, Merkel has refused to acknowledge any guilt for her role in the Ukraine crisis, saying last year: 'I don't blame myself for not having tried hard enough. I tried sufficiently. It is a great sadness that I did not succeed.' " (Legacy? What Legacy? Angel Merkel, Queen Of Migrant And Energy Crises Gets Germany's Highest Award by Kurt Zindulka). Item. Angela Merkel dissolved the borders of Europe and opened the floodgates to mobile germ factories fueled by ancient mosques preaching mental derangement. Marching under the banners of moral relativism, multiculturalism and Yes We Can!, she inaugurated a migrant crisis without precedent in the history of Europe. She unleashed covens of vampires from distant Eastern caves which drained the German state and economy of its life and energy. She unlocked doors to dimensions of fear and terror called into action by mullahs and minarets and never before witnessed in the history of Europe. She created an inflow of aliens whose language was murder, mayhem, dissimulation and deceit. She transformed Germany into a refuge and sanctuary for the enemies of freedom programmed to kill and destroy by fearsome algorithms thundered out by Allah. She allowed an inrush of moral monsters from far off places, changed the spiritual coloration of the nation, and fashioned a new ruling demographic of cultural, political and economic decline: "Merkel has similarly been unrepentant in terms of the other major policy that came to define her tenure in office, the European Migrant Crisis of 2015 when she unilaterally opened the doors of Europe open to mass migration. The open borders policy, which allowed over a million migrants from Syria and elsewhere to flood the country, was promised to usher in a globalist vision of prosperity, however, in reality, the vast majority of migrants who entered the country have been an economic drain, with some sixty five per cent being recorded as unemployed by 2019. Studies from the government itself have also admitted the mass influx of foreigners from far off places to a rise in violent crime and terror attacks. In a defining moment for the crisis, a fraudulent asylum seeker, Anis Amri murdered a dozen people and injured over fifty more after he drove a heavy goods truck into a crowded Christmas market in December of 2016. In addition to the economic and social degradation witnessed in Germany, Merkel's decision has also had serious implications for the demographic makeup of the country, with one third of the population predicted to have a foreign background (either being from a foreign country themselves or having at least one migrant parent) by the year 2040." (Legacy? What Legacy? Angel Merkel, Queen Of Migrant And Energy Crises Gets Germany's Highest Award by Kurt Zindulka). Alan Pinkerton was an American detective who created the Pinkerton National Detective Agency. He was a national hero. He foiled a plot to assassinate president elect Abraham Lincoln in 1861, he supplied the Union Army with military intelligence during the Civil War, and he established the world famous Rogues' Gallery, a compilation of names, descriptions and photographs of leading criminals. In Germany beginning in the nineteenth century, a Rogues' Gallery has cast a pall over the nation. The names, descriptions and photographs of its members have been the nation's public voices of statism and socialism. Their names begin with Otto von Bismarck and progress through Adolf Hitler, Konrad Adenauer, Willy Brandt, Helmut Kohl and Angela Merkel. The third longest serving chancellor in Germany's history, at sixteen years and sixteen days, Angela Merkel brought the radical, social state which is Germany to its culmination and moved to the head of the Rogues' Gallery.

THE CONSPIRACY AGAINST DONALD TRUMP

A conspiracy is a secret plan between people formed for an illegal purpose. It is a plot hatched which is kept secret from the public. It is a group of people united in usurping, altering and overthrowing lawful authority. It is a crime, a civil, criminal and constitutional wrong, which has plagued the history of free societies since freedom first walked upon the face of the earth. In the twenty first century, in what was once the freest society on earth, was once the citadel and lighthouse of freedom, was once the arsenal and armory of freedom, a conspiracy took hold which shattered the institutions of government, and changed the course of the nation for all time to come. In the twenty first century, a conspiracy reaching up to the highest levels of power struck the United States of America. The backstory to this tragedy of world historical proportions was the rise of communism in every home, school and office in the land a century before. Packaged in bright red boxes marked progressivism, communism came to America by popular demand at the dawn of the twentieth century, and in subsequent developments, in programs and policies called Trust Busting, the National Interest, the New Deal, Social Security, the Fair Deal, the New Frontier, the Great Society, Centrism, Compassionate Conservatism, the Third Way, Hope and Change, and the Affordable Care Act, communism became a terrifying synonym for the nation's political and cultural establishment. This establishment has tolerated no opposition and when opposition has arisen, the establishment has mobilized to expunge it. In 2016, the Electoral College, unaccompanied by the popular vote, gave a maverick, an outsider and an antiestablishmentarian the office of the president of the United States. In 2016, the Electoral College, to the exclusion of the American people who had voted for communism to become the establishment a century before, made Donald Trump president, and immediately the people sent out orders to the establishment to expunge the interloper. The expungement appeared in the form of secret efforts, undertaken to preserve the semblance and appearance of a law abiding government, and the efforts commenced before President elect Trump took his oath of office on January 20, 2017 at the West Wing of the United States Capital Building, and commenced in 2016 during the presidential campaign. On May 15, 2023, the conspiracy was exposed in a three hundred page report issued by Special Counsel John Durham. The conspiracy involved the fabrication of collusion between the Trump campaign and Russia and the accusation that Trump was a Russian agent. It involved the Department of Justice and the Federal Bureau of Investigation rejecting the principle of nonpartisan inquiry and fidelity to the law and fabricating events and activities purporting to prove that Trump was a fifth column set up by the Kremlin. It involved the uncritical and automatic acceptance of information fabricated by antiTrump individuals and organizations. It involved dossiers whose covers were stamped smears, slanders and scurrilousness. It involved the use of unevaluated, unanalyzed and unverified pseudointelligence. It involved the use of Hillary Clinton campaign propaganda. It involved the use of a double standard: one standard for Donald Trump and one standard for Hillary Clinton. It involved a full investigation into Trump based upon fabricated reports, an investigation without restraint, integrity or objectivity of any kind, and no investigation of any kind into Clinton's illegal activities and reports of Russian collusion with Clinton. It involved collusion between the federal government and the establishment media to discredit and displace Trump. It involved the deployment of passions and prejudices against Trump in an endeavor to the nullify the Constitution and stage a coup d'etat: "The long awaited report by Special Counsel John Durham tasked to look into the FBI’s investigation of the Trump campaign for Russian collusion was released Monday, concluding that the FBI should have never launched an investigation into the Trump campaign. Durham’s 300 page report found a damning conclusion: 'Based on the review of Crossfire Hurricane and related intelligence activities, we conclude that the Department and the FBI failed to uphold their important mission of strict fidelity to the law in connection with certain events and activities described in this report'. 'Our investigation also revealed that senior FBI personnel displayed a serious lack of analytical rigor towards the information that they received, especially information received from politically affiliated persons and entities,' Durham’s report said, in apparent reference to the Hillary Clinton campaign funded Fusion GPS 'pee dossier' alleging collusion that the FBI relied on to investigate Trump. Durham said before the allegation from an Australian diplomat that then Trump campaign adviser George Papadopoulos told him the Trump campaign had dirt on Clinton, there was no evidence of any Trump campaign collusion with Russia. But despite this 'unevaluated intelligence information,' the FBI 'swiftly opened an investigation, known as Crossfire Hurricane.' Durham wrote: 'In particular, at the direction of Deputy Director Andrew McCabe, Deputy Assistant Director for Counterintelligence Peter Strzok opened Crossfire Hurricane immediately. It involved the vilification of Trump to distract attention from Hillary Clinton's illegal use of a private email server to disseminate classified information. Strzok, at a minimum, had pronounced hostile feelings toward Trump. The matter was opened as a full investigation without ever having spoken to the persons who provided the information.' Durham said the Justice Department and FBI acted without 'appropriate objectivity or restraint in pursuing allegations of collusion or conspiracy between a US political campaign and a foreign power,' he said. He also said the FBI used a different standard when it came to looking at Clinton’s campaign. 'The speed and manner in which the FBI opened and investigated Crossfire Hurricane during the presidential election season based on raw, unanalyzed, and uncorroborated intelligence also reflected a noticeable departure from how it approached prior matters involving possible attempted foreign election interference plans aimed at the Clinton campaign.' The report also said the FBI received 'highly significant intelligence' from a trusted foreign source that the Clinton campaign had a plan to 'vilify Trump by tying him to Vladimir Putin so as to divert attention from her own concerns relating to her use of a private email server. 'Unlike the FBI's opening of a full investigation of unknown members of the Trump campaign based on raw, uncorroborated information, the FBI never opened any type of inquiry, issued any taskings, employed any analytical personnel, or produced any analytical products in connection with the information,' Durham said. There was a 'predisposition to open an investigation into Trump,' the report said. Durham slammed the integrity of the FBI. 'The promulgation of additional rules and regulations to be learned in yet more training sessions would likely prove to be a fruitless exercise if the FBI's guiding principles of Fidelity, Bravery and Integrity are not engrained in the hearts and minds of those sworn to meet the FBI's mission of 'Protect[ing] the American People and Uphold[ing] the Constitution of the United States,' he wrote. The report comes as Trump is running for reelection as president. He and his administration faced constant scrutiny under then Special Counsel Robert Mueller. The allegations of collusion and ongoing investigation sidelined some administration officials, such as then Attorney General Jeff Sessions. Establishment media outlets also hyped the allegations, putting the Trump administration under nonstop scrutiny." (Durham Report: FBI Should Never Have Begun 'Russia Collusion' Investigation by Kristina Wong). The conspiracy against Donald Trump reached up to the highest levels of government. A sacred trust was breached by the most powerful people in the land. A swirling cloud of abuse, disparagement and defamation was set into motion by the nation's leaders who had sworn to uphold the Constitution. Commanded by national security officials, by CIA Director John Brennan and by the president and vice president of the United States, a movement of illegal seizure of power was directed against a figure who commanded a national platform and fought indefatigably for the defeat of the establishment. The conspiracy against Donald Trump was a conspiracy against the victories achieved on the battlefields of Lexington and Concord and a conspiracy against the liberal democratic order established as their monument: "The report also detailed how former CIA director John Brennan briefed former President Barack Obama and his top national security officials on the matter. Brennan briefed the Obama administration on the 'alleged approval by Hillary Clinton on July 26, 2016, of a proposal from one of her foreign policy advisers to vilify Donald Trump by stirring up a scandal claiming interference by Russian security services.' 'CIA Director John Brennan and other intelligence officials recognized the significance of the intelligence by expeditiously' briefing Obama and other national security officials, Durham's 300 page report added." (Elise Stefanik: Durham Report Shows 'Criminal Abuse Of Power' Went Up To Obama-Biden White House by Jordan Dixon-Hamilton). Time: November 5, 1605. Place: London, England. Event: a conspiracy by Catholics to blow up the House of Lords during the State Opening of Parliament as a prelude to a Catholic uprising, the installation of a Catholic head of state, and the abolition of religious freedom in Britain. The Gunpowder Plot against King James I failed because English liberty was a shining jewel which would not blacken, a rooted island which would not be submerged, and a defensive moat which would not crumble. In America in the twenty first century, a movement to overthrow democracy, weaponize the federal government, politicize the FBI and the Department of Justice, manufacture smears against Donald Trump, and then have these smears transcribed by scribes in the employ of the mass media, was the gunpowder, was a conspiracy, which succeeded. It blew up the institutions of American liberty.
